Rumanian Troops Fight Mobs Protesting Cession to Hungary

Rioters Invade Nazi, Italian Consulates; Bayonets Guard Carol's Palace

Rumanians Riot

By Robert St. John,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest (Monday), Sept. 2.—A mob broke into the German consulate at Brasov early today, ripped down pictures of Adolf Hitler and ground them to bits underfoot as bloody demonstrations swept all Rumania and pitchfork-brandishing peasants lined the border of old Transylvania, determined not to yield to Hungary under Axis compulsion.

At Cluj, ancient capital of Transylvania, the Italian consul was dragged out and beaten.

Two prominent statesmen were jailed in Bucharest, thousands of reserve gendarmes were called out and warnings were broadcast over the radio in the Rumanian government's unavailing effort to end the rioting against ceding half of Transylvania.

Nazi Sportsman Attacked

Damage was widespread and there were countless injuries.

At Brasov, home of a large German group, Nazi flags in the German consulate were torn down and reviled and a Nazi sportsman named Hehnline, who had gone there for an automobile race, was attacked.

The swastika was snatched from his car and replaced by the Rumanian standard.

Among those jailed in Bucharest for leading demonstrations were Ion Lugajanu, member of Parliament, former Minister to Rome and editor of Universul, leading Bucharest daily; his wife and M. Ghita, former minister of popular culture.

[Lugajanu was once charge d'affaires in the Washington legation.]

Bayonets Guard Palace

The royal palace of King Carol was surrounded by large squads of troops and gendarmes with fixed bayonets. They used tear gas to hold the crowds back and on at least one occasion broke up demonstrations by spraying the mob with water sprinklers.

Armored cars patroled around the palace, and the capital streets rumbled with their passing, machine guns bristling from every turret.

The Bucharest radio announced the public had been allowed three days in which to express its feelings over the German-Italian decision that Rumania give Hungary half of Transylvania, but it said this period now was over and grave measures would be taken against demonstra-

British Claim To Be Gaining Control of Air

Churchill Felicitates Bomber Command On Offensive on Axis

By James M. Minifie

London, Sept. 1.—In this 24 hours which marked the anniversary of the German invasion of Poland, England suffered some of the worst air raids the Nazis have yet delivered, distributed chiefly over the northern and central sections of the country.

Londoners, however, heard only three air alarms during the daylight hours, much better than the record of recent days.

If raiding was heavy, nevertheless conviction was high that although worse might yet be to come, the Nazis are definitely losing command of the air.

This feeling was expressed by Prime Minister Churchill in a message to the bomber command congratulating the squadrons which have been attacking Germany and Italy.

Churchill expressed the cabinet's satisfaction that "so many important military objectives in Germany and Italy have been so sharply smitten," and concluded, "all this is another sign and proof that the command of the air is being gradually and painfully, but nonetheless remorselessly wrested from the Nazi criminals who hoped by this means to terrorize and dominate European civilization."

These words reflect the conviction of the people who, on the first Sunday in September a year ago, looked with trepidation at the thought of encountering the might of the German air force, then an unknown quantity.

A year ago Messerschmitt was a

D. C. Man Dies in Rough Sea; 10,000 Flee Jersey Torrents

Train Tracks to Shore Reported Washed Out; 4 Persons Known Dead

Hurricane Misses Virginia and Maryland, Veers to Northeast

By the Associated Press

Camden, N. J., Sept. 1.—Torrential rains struck southern New Jersey before dawn today, causing at least four deaths and inflicting property damage unofficially estimated at more than $1,000,000.

First reports indicated that possibly 10,000 persons had been driven from their homes. The entire village of Lumberton was inundated by swollen Rancocas Creek, which made 2,000 homeless.

Mrs. Zore Crispin, 25, and her 18-month-old daughter, Hazel Emma, were swept away as they tried to cross a swollen creek from their home at Daretown, Salem County.

At Mantua, 40 homes were submerged.

The rising Rancocas Creek drove 100 persons from their homes in Mount Holly, Burlington County, and 125 other families in the path of the flood were advised to leave.

One hundred National Guardsmen at Fort Dix were ordered there to assist in rescue work. Army cots were set up in the National Guard armory for refugees.

Mount Holly's business section was under several feet of water.

Throughout most of the South Jersey communities the story was the same—a sudden hurried flight to high ground for those who lived along the banks of streams.

A Washington man was drowned yesterday in pounding seas off Ocean City, Md., as a hurricane, scheduled to strike the Virginia-Maryland coast, veered northeast and roared out into the Atlantic.

However, along the coastline of New York and New England, residents were warned to be on the alert against a recurrence of the tragedy two years ago when a hurricane swept across the area and took 600 lives.

According to the Weather Bureau, the storm was centered last night 150 miles southeast of Atlantic City. The coast escaped the full force of the 75-mile-an-hour wind, but the fringe of the storm whipped up gales and heavy seas.

Swell Overturns Boat

In such a battering sea, off Ocean City, Charles Munro, 48, of 626 Sixth street northeast, was drowned when a swell struck a fishing boat and hurled him into the sea. A second man was rescued.

According to the rescued man, Joseph Leidy, of Pittsburgh, he and Munro were sitting side by side on the edge of the craft's aftercabin when a vicious lunge of the boat threw them into the water. Munro, it was said, could not swim and was swept away. The fishing craft named the Charles B. Mason, carrying eight others, encountered a strong tide as it headed for home, and Coast Guardsmen stood by in a lifeboat as she passed through heavy breakers.

The tropical storm, attended by winds of hurricane force, was moving north-northeast at about 12 miles an hour, the Weather Bureau said yesterday. Indications were that within the next 12 to 24 hours the storm center would pass a short distance south of Nantucket Island accompanied by strong east to northeast wind.

High tides and gale-like winds were expected to smash the New

Canterbury Asks U. S. Moral Aid In 'Grim Struggle'

London, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Archbishop of Canterbury broadcast an appeal to the United States for "all the strength of your moral and spiritual support" in the "grim struggle" in which he said Britain is "defending Christian civilization."

Recalling the "relief and refreshment" that came to the Allies when the United States entered the World War, he declared that "once again might is arrayed against right and is threatening the liberties of the world and . . . so far its success has been unbroken."

In Britain, he said, "we honestly believe that we are holding the fort for other nations as well and for the world."

Throngs of Visitors Pour Into Capital for Labor Day

The man with the muscle and manual skill, the American laboring man, today celebrates his place in American life, and at the same time the Nation's Capital will welcome what may be a record-breaking crowd of visitors from all parts of the Nation.

Fair and somewhat cooler weather was officially forecast for Labor Day.

Railroads and bus lines yesterday reported a vast influx of people. The Greyhound Bus Terminal said its lines broke all records Saturday, that the rush continued yesterday and bids likely to continue today.

The Union Station master's office said the influx was larger than last year, that many trains were split into two sections to accommodate those wanting to spend the holidays here.

Many sights will be available to the visitors. The Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol Building and the Washington Monument will be open. The Library of Congress will be open from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m.

The National Museum will be open from 1:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m.; the Folger Shakespeare Library from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.; Arlington National Cemetery, including the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., and Ford's Theater, where President Lincoln was assassinated, from 12:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. The Capitol will be open from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.; the Monument from 12:30 to 4:30, and the Lincoln

60,000 Guardsmen Called Up For Active Service Sept. 16; D. C. Summons Is Deferred

320 Children Saved in Ship Torpedoing

Sing as They Take To Lifeboats; Only One of 875 Persons Aboard Is Lost

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 1.—Torpedoing of a British refugee ship taking 320 children to Canada was announced by the ministry of information tonight but all the children were saved.

The ship remained afloat after the torpedo struck Friday evening, the announcement said. There was no indication of its identity.

The Daily Herald said the torpedoed liner had 875 persons aboard, including the crew of 275.

The only casualty was the vessel's purser.

As they took to the lifeboats, the children sang "Oh Johnnie, Oh Johnnie" and "Roll Out the Barrel."

[An authorized German spokesman said no information had been received in Berlin about the torpedoing, and that "we don't believe the report.

["Quite obviously, Germany which loves children and cares for them with the utmost concern, isn't in the business of sinking child refugee ships," the spokesman said.

["But in this incident the Athenia affair must be remembered."]

Majority Clad in Pajamas

When more than 70 of the children had been landed at a northern British port early today most still were clad only in pajamas. A member of the crew said that "the children behaved splendidly and there was no panic. They took their lifeboat stations as if they were experienced seamen."

The fact that all the children were saved was credited to their arduous lifeboat drill before the submarine struck.

They filed onto the slanting decks of the ship, marched to their lifeboat stations and were helped into the waiting boats with hardly a whimper, it was said.

The announcement said that 74 of the children were from Scotland. The group was one of a number selected for transfer overseas by the Children's Overseas Reception Board, and were "almost entirely" from state aid schools.

From Industrial Areas

They were mostly from the industrial areas of London, Manchester, Birmingham, Yorkshire, Northumberland, Cardiff, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Newark, Enfield, Bristol, Southampton, Glasgow and Aberdeen.

Rescue ships, the announcement said, were fortunately at hand, so the necessity of exposure in open boats in rough waters was eliminated.

Transfers were quickly made and the children landed safely at a north British port.

One of the ship's officers said, "I have never seen anything so brave in my 30 years at sea. The children took their danger with chins up and never a whimper."

Largest Number of Experts Ever Called To Investigate Flying Accident Assembles At Scene to Reconstruct Airliner Disaster

While two official investigations were assured into the crash of a Pennsylvania Central airliner near Lovettsville, Va., Saturday with the loss of 25 lives, mounting demands for a Congressional inquiry arose yesterday on Capitol Hill.

From those demands it appeared likely the worst airplane accident in the history of American commercial flying would fan into life again the dormant quarrel in Congress over President Roosevelt's reorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The reorganization, which put an end to the Air Safety Board, was accomplished over intense opposition in the Senate.

Investigations will be made this week by the Civil Aeronautics Board, successor to the CAA, and by Dr. John A. Gibson, Loudoun County coroner. Dr. Gibson said an inquest would be held Tuesday at Leesburg, county seat.

Hearing Likely Thursday

Harllee Branch, chairman of the CAB, said yesterday public hearings would be held, probably Thursday in Washington. At present, he explained, the board was still endeavoring to "reconstruct what actually happened."

Already the CAB inquiry has assembled at Lovettsville and on the scarred alfalfa field where the plane crashed with both engines roaring wide open, what is the largest number of aviation experts ever called together to investigate a flying accident. Witnesses were interviewed there by Robert Crist, CAB attorney, and Frank Crowley, investigator.

Jerome Lederer, director of the CAB's safety bureau, said the big airliner with its 21 passengers and 4 P.-C. A. employes had struck on its nose and left wing, turning over

Willkie Favors Less U.S. Power Over Unions

Pledges to Seek Collective Bargaining Free From Interference

By William B. Ardery
By the Associated Press

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 1.—Wendell L. Willkie said in a Labor Day statement today that if he were elected President he would "arrest the present trend toward placing labor unions under Governmental control."

In a labor-industry relationship, he asserted, "we must rely on the compulsion of the law only as a last extremity."

"I shall lend every influence," the Republican nominee continued, "to establish forthright collective bargaining between management and men upon a basis of good will, conciliation and economic voluntarism and free from interference."

After issuing his Labor Day statement, Willkie disclosed that a meeting Thursday with Midwest Republican leaders would be expanded to include representatives from New England and other Eastern States.

Willkie's aides said the meeting would be preliminary to an extensive Republican campaign. They explained that the nominee wanted to talk with party officials from States where he will do little or no campaigning on his forthcoming 7,000-mile western tour.

In his Labor Day comment, Willkie said American labor "is de-

White House Charges Willkie Revealed Secret U. S. Report

Aboard Roosevelt train en route to Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 1 (AP).—The White House tonight criticized Wendell L. Willkie on the grounds that, as a private citizen, he had made public sections of a confidential Government document.

In support of his opposition to a provision in the conscription bill permitting the Government to take over plants needed for defense contracts, the Republican Presidential nominee released at Rushville, Ind., yesterday what he described as portions of a report by the War Resources Board headed by Edward R. Stettinius, now a member of the Defense Commission.

The report, handed to President Roosevelt several months ago, never had been made public.

Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary, told reporters on a special train taking the President into the South on a speaking trip:

"I merely will say to you that the Stettinius report is a confidential Government document. Willkie is still a private citizen and has released excerpts from a confidential Government report."

Early said it would be "interesting" to learn how Willkie obtained a copy of the report.

He said the implication of Willkie's release of excerpts was that the copy came from Stettinius. But, he added, Stettinius had only one copy which "is locked in his vault and has been right along."

Several copies were in the hands of high Army and Navy officials,

Roosevelt Signs Order Affecting Militia Outfits In 26 States

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday called out 60,500 National Guardsmen in 26 organizations from 26 States for a year's service in the United States Army, beginning September 16.

This first call, under authority given the President by Congress last month, included no units from the District of Columbia. Those called, a War Department spokesman pointed out, were distributed chiefly in nonindustrial sections of the country.

While no one in the War Department would predict yesterday when District Guardsmen might expect to be called, tentative plans for inducting some units in October or November already have been revealed.

One Virginia regiment, the 246th Coast Artillery, commanded by Col. Alonzo E. Wood, of Lynchburg, was included. It is composed of elements from Lynchburg, Richmond, Roanoke, Danville, Clifton Forge, Covington, Blacksburg and Vinton.

Troops to be inducted into Federal service may be used in the continental United States, its territories and possessions and the Philippine Islands.

D. C. Units Up Later

Only once before in peacetime have the Nation's citizen soldiers been called to the colors for extended duty. In 1916, with war in Europe and Mexican rebel forces making murderous incursions across this country's southern border, President Wilson ordered the Guard into Federal service and sent it to the border. It did not doff its uniforms until the end of the World War, three years later.

Mr. Roosevelt's order, signed at Hyde Park Saturday night, was issued from the special train bearing him yesterday to Chattanooga, Tenn., where he will dedicate the new Chickamauga Dam today. It was the first move in a program to increase the Nation's armed forces on land from the present standing army of 289,000 to 1,200,000 before 12 months have gone. Passage of the conscription bill, now in the House, will close the only remaining gap in the plan.

The 60,500 officers and men affected by the first call will be swelled to the authorized full peace-time strength of the units involved of 76,689 while they are in the service. Increases will be by intensive recruiting, it was said.

Include Four Divisions

Units called, most of which have just returned from three weeks of field training and war games, include four divisions.

Thirtieth, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee, to be trained at Camp Jackson, S. C.

Forty-first, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming, to train at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Forty-fourth, New York and New Jersey, to train at Camp Dix, N. J.

Forty-fifth, Oklahoma, Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado, to train at Fort Sill, Okla.

All divisions were to leave their tank companies at home, apparently because of the lack of tanks for training.

The 197th (antiaircraft), New Hampshire, to train at Cape Cod Cantonment.

The 198th (antiaircraft), Delaware, to train at Camp Upton, N. Y., later at Savannah, Ga.

The 202d (antiaircraft), Illinois, to train at Camp Logan, Ill., later at March Field, Calif.

House Victory Seen for Foes Of Industrial Draft Proposal

Rep. May Predicts Rejection by Military Affairs Committee

By Coleman B. Jones
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Opponents of the Senate's action in tacking an "industry draft" provision onto the Burke-Wadsworth selective service bill appeared today to be headed toward a victory in the House which would throw the whole mounting controversy over conscription into conference between the two chambers.

Chairman Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, predicted last night that his House Military Affairs Committee would vote Tuesday morning against sponsoring an "industry conscription" amendment to its version of the draft bill during the impending debate on the floor of the House this week.

Such action would have the effect of squelching the proposal as far as the House is concerned, and of sending that chamber's spokesmen into the conference with the Senate's committee under instruction to fight against inclusion of this provision in the final compromise.

Variety of Possibilities

The outcome could range anywhere from outright elimination of the proposal from the act to inclusion without change of the Senate's Russel-Overton amendment, with both chambers given an opportunity to vote as often as might be necessary on one or more variations within those limits.

The bill, entangled in greater controversy than ever because of the Senate's adoption of the Russell-Overton amendment to enable the President to condemn and take over industrial plants for national defense, is to be called up in the House on Tuesday under an "open rule" allowing two days of general debate.

Representative May, who will have charge of it on the floor, worked on it at his office throughout yesterday and predicted tonight that the House version, differing in major provisions from the Senate bill, would be passed Tuesday or Friday by a 2-to-1 majority.

No Mention of Industry

The bill now technically before the House is confined to the problem of strengthening the Nation's armed forces through universal selective military service, without any "industry conscription" provision. Under the rule, it will be virtually impossible to add such a provision to the measure in the form of an amendment unless it is approved and offered by the Military Affairs Committee.

The committee is to meet Wednesday morning to decide whether to sponsor the Russell-Overton amendment or some modified version of "industry conscription" legislation, and Chairman May expressed confidence that it would reject all such proposals. He expects to confer informally with other members on the subject today.

If a mapority should decide at the meeting Tuesday to back such an amendment, he said, he, of course, would present it on the floor, but might reserve the right to oppose it in the debate and vote against it.

Adding his voice to the rising chorus of opposition to the Russell-Overton amendment, Chairman May declared, "Industry already has volunteered: I see no reason for drafting it."

He remarked that the heavy new taxes to be levied on corporation profits appeared to be "enough conscription" in that field.

Revamping of the excess profits tax bill will get under way in the Senate Finance Committee with open committee hearings tomorrow morning. Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, is hopeful that these hearings can be completed within three days, but Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, expressed the opinion that they could not be concluded before the end of the week.

In the meantime, Senate and House conferees will be working to compromise differences between their two versions of the "total defense" appropriations bill, which Senate amendments have increased above the $5,133,000,000 level. Carrying funds for starting construction of the "two-ocean" Navy, 18,400 Army and Navy airplanes and equipment for the contemplated minimum army of 1,200,000 men and related activities, the bill has grown considerably since it was passed by the House, so numerous adjustments will have to be made.

The Senate itself will have little to do during the week. It will remain in recess until Wednesday, and then is expected to meet only long enough to pay tribute to Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, who was one of the victims of yesterday's air transport crash. Resuming consideration of legislation on Thursday, it will still have no major items of the defense expansion program before it until next week.

50 Per Cent Increase Seen

Meanwhile, the National Defense Commission reported that plane production should increase by 50 per cent by the end of this year. President Roosevelt told reporters last week that present deliveries are at the rate of about 800 a month.

William Knudsen, the commission's production chief, reported that there is "tremendous activity" on the industrial preparedness front.

In the last week, Knudsen's report showed, there have been large increases in reserve supplies of raw materials vital to defense.

"Arrangements were made," the report said, "to increase the stock pile of rubber by 180,000 tons, bringing the reserves arranged for in this particlar commodity up to 416,000 tons. Over three-quarters of the stock pile of manganese has already been arranged for. Various other strategic materials are flowing into the country every day, insuring the Nation against shortage in case of emergency."

Text of Willkie Labor Remarks

For more than 40 years now, the first Monday in September has been set aside by Congressional act to honor American labor. The wage earners in no other land enjoy the recognition given by Labor day to the true status of labor and the dignity of work. I had decided not to make a speech today dealing with labor, in the belief that it would be more appropriate to leave this day for the utterances of labor leaders themselves. I do wish, however, to take this occasion to pay tribute to Labor Day and the American wage earner, who has played such a great part in building up the American economic and political system.

In turn, American workers may well rejoice that in this land four great freedoms — the right to speak, to print, to assemble and to worship God—are written into the Bill of Rights in response to the judgment from artisans and farmers a century and a half ago, and that in America these freedoms still prevail.

Dictatorships Ban Unions

Labor Day should also cause every friend of American labor to remember that in the totalitarian dictatorships of Europe they have liquidated free trade unions, and have imprisoned or, in some cases, murdered union leaders. Outside of America, Britain is the only great country where trade unions still exist, true to their tradition. The British workers today are performing a service of greatest value as a vital partner in the defense of their country.

Leon Jouhaux, the French laor leader, said in his last message to American workers, "Hitlerism and free organized labor cannot exist in the same world." American labor, realizing this fact, is determined to do everything to prevent the spread of dictatorship in this country. On February 14, 1939, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor issued an important statement, as follows:

"The absorption of the unemployed and the creation of work opportunities for all who are able and willing to work in private industry have ever been a part of the economic philosophy of the American Federation of Labor—we are firmly convinced that various forms of governmental spending, either in the distribution of relief or in the development of maintenance and work projects designed to supply relief wages to unemployed, can only serve as temporary measures and cannot and do not provide a permanent solution for unemployment."

The A. F. of L. council goes further and frankly states:

"A political and economic state of mind should be created which will enable all financiers and the owners and managers of industry to face the future with confidence, willing to risk the expenditure of funds for the development of industrial enterprises and in the manufacture and sale of manufactured products. Whatever stands in the way, whatever barrier may have been created, ought to be broken down so that our industrial processes may function in a proper way. And unemployment may thus be overcome. . . . We believe that private initiative, private investment and private endeavor and private industry should be encouraged and supported. We assert that those who invest in private industry should earn a fair return upon such investment, and that labor should be paid a wage which would accord to all workers and their families an opportunity to live in all decency and comfort."

Pledges Employment Drive

No better statement of my own views could be possibly made. On this Labor Day I pledge, if elected President, to enlist the wholehearted cooperation of labor, industry, agriculture and every other group in the task of overcoming our present economic stagnation and wiping out unemployment. The enlightened view that many of our modern labor leaders are taking toward our economic problem as a whole, will be of great assistance to me in fulfilling this pledge. As Philip Murray and Morris L. Cooke said in "Organized Labor and Production":

"We need labor organizations that will not merely advance the immediate interests of particular groups of labor, but will regard the interests of industry as a whole, including the workers, and of the economic system.

It also promise to arrest the present trend toward placing labor unions under Government control. The statement of that great labor leader, Samuel Gompers, "What the Government gives, the Government can take away," is particularly pertinent at the present time. We must rely upon the compulsion of the law only as a last extremity. I shall lend every influence to establish forthright collective bargaining between management and men upon a basis of good will, conciliations and economic voluntarism and free from interference.

White House Aide Criticizes Willkie

Early asserted.

Willkie has demanded that the President release the report and also that the Chief Executive make known his views on the conscription bill provision regarding industry—the Russell-Overton Amendment.

In the first instance, Mr. Roosevelt said at a press conference recently, that conditions had changed so much that there was no more point to releasing the Stettinius report tha nthere would be to publicizing a Civil War plan.

Willkie contended in a statement last week that the Russell-Overton amendment included the elements of a "potential dictatorship."

Urges Coordination

One excerpt from the Stettinius board report which Willkie singled out for quotation said:

"It is our considered judgment that coordination offers the only effective means of converting American industries for the purposes of war. American businessmen, like all Americans, are accustomed to democratic procedure. More effectiveness can be obtained through voluntary cooperation than through force."

Early boarded the Presidential Special, at Washington, where it stopped for half an hour on a southward run from Hyde Park, N. Y.

Secretary Hull, carying a bulky brief case, also got on to confer with Mr. Roosevelt for a few minutes before the train pulled out.

Hull said he discussed principaliy British matters with the Chief Executive, leading to speculation whether he had reported on the progress of negotiations with England for naval and air bases on British territory in the New World and perhaps on the question of the sale or transfer of over-age destroyers to Britain.

Thousands of visitors jammed Chattanooga tonight to witness the arrival of President Roosevelt.

The President will make his first formal address since accepting the Democratic nomination for the Presidency at 11 a. m. (E. S. T.). A crowd of 100,000 is expected for this speech dedicating the Chickamauga Dam. The exercises will be broadcast (N. B. C. and C. B. S.).

Gov. Prentice Cooper, Mayor E. D. Bass, County Judge Will Cummings and Celebration Chairman R. E. Biggers will board the President's special train when it arrives here to welcome Mr. Roosevelt to the city. Later, at the dam, Gov. Cooper will preside and Senator Kenneth D. McKellar will present the President.

Mr. Roosevelt will make another dedication speech in the afternoon at Newfound Gap, near Gatlinburg, in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes will preside at the ceremonies and introduce the President.

Willkie Fires Back

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 1 (INS).—Wendell Willkie tonight made sharp and prompt retort to criticism from the White House for releasing excerpts from the Stettinius war resources report which never has been made public.

The White House said the report was confidential and that Willkie, as a private citizen, had no right to publicize it.

Said Willkie:

"The President just the other day said the Stettinius report was as obsolete and as historical as a report on the Civil War. Surely the Government is not keeping Civil War reports confidential.

termined to do everything to prevent the spread of dictatorship in this country."

He added:

"Labor Day should also cause every friend of American labor to remember that in the totalitarian dictatorships of Europe they have liquidated free trade unions, and have imprisoned, or in some cases, murdered union leaders."

Willkie said that if he were elected, he would "enlist the wholehearted cooperation of labor, industry, agriculture and every other group in the task of overcoming our present economic stagnation and wiping out unemployment."

Following a conference yesterday with Harry W. Colmery, former American Legion commander and now chairman of the Willkie War Veterans National Committee, Willkie said in a statement today that the formation of the latter organization "confirms their (veterans') interest in the preservation of this Government as one representative of the people."

"I pledge to them now," he said, "my belief in the American system as we, who have defended it, understand it."

Martin Might Attend Session

Chairman Joseph W. Martin, of the Republican National Committee, will attend Thursday's campaign meeting here unless his duties as House Minority Leader keep him in Washington.

Willkie talked by telephone last night with his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, who is in Salem, Oreg., and learned that the latter would be unable to attend the conference. It was agreed, however, that McNary would come here to confer with Willkie before the presidential nominee leaves on his Western trip September 14. The Thursday meeting will be attended by national committeemen, committeewomen and State chairmen from the following States:

New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Iowa, Ohio, New Jersey, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, West Virginia and Tennessee.

Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, one of Willkie's backers for the Republican presidential nomination, was en route here today for a series of talks with the candidate.

Willkie headquarters issued a statment listing 17 occasions this year on which, it said, President Roosevelt had commented on legislation pending in Congress.

The table was prepared, it was announced, "in view of President Roosevelt's insistence that he never comments on pending legislation."

The tabulation:

January 13—Voiced approval of Congressional reapportionment bill.

January 19—Objected to elimination bv the House of funds for national resources board and office of Government reports.

February 2—Opposed House Committee reduction in farm relief estimates.

March 2—Criticized delay in Panama Canal legislation.

March 8—Indorsed Wheeler-Lea transportation bill.

March 15—Again opposed suggested changes in census questions.

March 26—Opposed any amendments to legislation continuing reciprocal trade program.

April 2—Opposed Senate committee action increasing rivers and harbors bill; suggested modification of bill to establish partial Federal control of oil production.

April 5—Urged additional funds for Byrd Antarctic Expedition; opposed Logan-Walter bill to permit court review of rulings by Federal agencies.

May 8—Again indorsed extension of Hatch Antipolitics Act.

June 14—Approved legislation extending sugar control law for one year.

July 27—Discussed problems involved in legislation to permit use of American ships for evacuation of British children.

Leaders Urge Labor to Back Rearmament

Roosevelt Pledges Economic Gains Will Be Maintained

By the Associated Press

American workers, celebrating their annual holiday in the midst of a great national rearmament effort, were urged by Government and labor leaders to rededicate themselves today to democracy.

President Roosevelt sounded this keynote in his Labor Day statement asking cooperation of all to strengthen and defend the American way of life.

"In its accomplishment," he said, "wage earners, well aware of the great economic and social gains they have made in the last seven years, may be assured that their contribution will not be at the cost of lowered labor standards or impaired social advances."

From John L. Lewis came a declaration that the C. I. O. "stands second to none in its determination to defend this Nation and its democratic way of life."

"Labor believes," Lewis added in a statement, "that there is no conflict between effective national defense and labor's program of complete security and full employment."

Lewis declared, too, that labor believed democracy could be defended "without the creation of an arms economy." He added:

"The enemies of labor seek in the guise of promoting national defense to resume their attacks on labor's rights. They would destroy our civil liberties. They would erode the right of collective bargaining. They would increase the hours of labor. They want to conscript into the Army millions of workers."

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., will deliver his Labor Day message at a rally this afternoon in Denver. His address will be broadcast at 3 p. m., (E.S.T.). Lewis also will make a radio talk at 4 p.m. (E.S.T.). Secretary Perkins will broadcast at 7 p. m. (E.S.T.).

In a review of its activities since last Labor Day, the Wage-Hour Administration estimated that as a result of the labor standards law 1,000,000 workers had received wage increases and the working hours of 2,000,000 had been shortened.

It said employers had been required to pay $2,616,617 in back wages and overtime to employes.

"We have done this in the democratic way and its works," Col. Philip Fleming, administrator, said of the agency's accomplishments.

"Today we celebrate the fact that we have not abdicated our sovereignty and our freedom in order to do those things and that we face the tests to come a stronger, more secure and a happier people than on Labor Day, 1939."

The National Labor Relations Board issued a summary of its activities since its creation five years ago. This listed settlement of 2,128 strikes and prevention of 857 others.

Strike settlements, the board said, sent 277,286 workers back to their jobs, and action averting other strikes prevented loss of employment for 199,086 workers.

The board's summary also showed 26,174 cases handled, and reinstatement of 20,845 workers found to have been "discriminatorily discharged," principally for union activity.

The Political Arena

Southhampton, N. Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, today placed the blame for the world's woes on the 1920 crop of "petty politicians at Washington and their shocking disregard of moral and political obligation."

BUTLER

These men, said the educator in his fourteenth annual Long Island address, were responsible for the collapse of this Nation's effort 20 years ago to lead the nations of the world in peaceful collaboration—an effort he said might well have "thwarted the decay of democracies and prevented the present war."

Both major political parties pledged the American people in 1920 to "support an agreement among the nations to preserve the peace of the world," Butler said.

Without naming names and without referring specifically to the Senate's final rejection in 1920 of America's entry into the League of Nations, and subsequent controversy about it, Butler continued:

"It is therefore obvious and of record that the American people were betrayed by the failure of those who were chosen to public office in 1920 to carry out the pledges so definitely made to them."

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP).—Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, asserted today that sale of destroyers to Great Britain "would be a belligerent act making us a party to the war and would in addition weaken our own defense."

Speaking on the University of Chicago's round-table broadcast, Nye asked:

"If those who advocate the transfer of destroyers are not willing to assert that it will make the difference between victory and defeat for Britain then why—if Britain is to be defeated—should we supply her with destroyers to surrender to Germany?"

The Federal Diary:

War Department, Defense Unit Workers to Get New Quarters

Railroad Retirement Board Building, First Section of Office Completed, To Be Occupied September 15

By Edward Ryan

War Department employes, on the jump from office to office ever since the defense program started, will be heading intto new quarters September 15.

That day is Sunday, but it will be moing day anyway, with the first of the new offices in the Railroad Retirement and Social Security buildings opening for War and National Defense Commission employes.

First section of the $15,000,000 office plant to open will be the smaller building originally planned for the Railroad Retirement Board, officials of the Public Buildings Administration said.

Two weeks later, three floors of the large Social Security Building will be ready for Government workers, and the entire structure will be in use by November 1, officials estimated. Their estimates, it was explained, were based on the chance, which they believe good, that there will be no more labor disputes on the construction work.

The first offices will be in use nearly four months ahead of the original schedule. When the War and Navy departments and the National Defense Commission started looking for extra space, they spotted the Social Security-Railroad Retirement structures as a good bet and grabbed it. Congress provided $500,000 more than the original $14,250,000 for the buildings, to speed up the work.

The portion of the construction covered by the extra appropriation is being handled on a "cost-plus" contract, according to Neal Melick, supervising engineer for the Public Building Administration.

By this arrangement, the contractor will be paid for the extra work needed to speed up the construction an amount equal to the extra cost, plus 5 per cent of the extra cast as his profit, Melick said.

While this "cost-plus-percentage-of-cost" basis for contracting is out of favor at the Public Buildings Administration, officials said it was made necessary by the emergency demand for more quarters for the expanding defense agencies.

Melick said the agency has a building superintendent, with his aides, and nine inspectors watching the construction and the costs of the Social Security-Railroad Retirement buildings.

In its newest program for defense building, the $150,000,000 defense housing bill before Congress, the Public Buildings Administration is seeking a plan that will ban the "cost-plus-percentage-of-cost" form of contract.

The bill, introduced by Chairman Lanham of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, authorizes the Federal works administrator, acting through the Public Buildings Administration, to supply housing for defense workers where the President finds a shortage which would impede the defense program.

Lanham's bill specifies that the "cost-plus-percentage-of-cost" contract shall not be used for defense dwellings, but permits a "cost-plus-fixed-fee" contract.

W. E. Reynolds, chief of the Public Buildings Administration, told the committee that the first form, where the contractors' profit increases with the cost of the construction, would put a premium on delays in building. The cost-plus-fixed-fee plan, he said, gives the contractor an incentive to speed the work, and cut down his overhead.

Lanham's committee will study the housing bill in executive session tomorrow.

Calendar: Interior Department officials and representatives of the oyster business, and newsmen will work out on two barrels of oysters at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Interior Department cafeteria. Officials said the ceremony would be official opening of the 1940 oyster season, but there will be coffee and sandwiches too . . . Washington has been selected for the Eastern region- convention of the Civil Service assembly next summer . . . Local 10 of the United Federal Workers will hold an open house party at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, at 8 p. m. Saturday. . . . Tryouts for parts in "Madame the Boss" will be held by the drama group of the Federal Playhouse, sponsored by the Agriculture NFFE local, at 8 p. m. today in the New Colonial Hotel.

Prettyman Heads Red Cross Unit

E. Barrett Prettyman, attorney, for the fourth successive year will direct the professional group of the District Red Cross roll call, it was announced yesterday by General Chairman Edgar Morris.

"The Professional Group will bend every effort completely to canvas all divisions within a few days of the opening of the roll call on September 23," Prettyman said. "We are better organized today than we have been at the same period of any roll call and we feel certain of achieving our goal of 8,000 Red Cross members."

16 Senators Face Third-Term Quiz

Burke Will Query Those Who Favored La Follette Limit

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The 16 Democratic Senators remaining in the Senate who voted for the LaFollette anti-third term resolution in 1928 will be invited to testify before a Senate judiciary subcommittee which meets Wednesday to consider the Burke bill calling for a Constitutional amendment to limit the Presidency to a single, 6-year term, Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, revealed yesterday.

Senator Burke, who bolted the Democratic Party and is supporting Wendell L. Willkie, said the Senators would be asked why they believed in 1928 that any deviation from the precedent set by earlier Presidents against a third term would be "unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril for our free institutions," and whether they still regard it as such in the case of President Roosevelt. If they have changed their stand since 1928, Senator Burke said that he would like to ask them their reasons.

Meanwhile, Senator Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, charged that President Roosevelt was hiding behind the issue of national defense, and using it to divert attention from the failure of his domestic program as well as letting it serve as an excuse for not having a free and fair discussion of campaign issues with Willkie.

Attacks TVA

In a statement Senator Bridges also attacked the President for his Tennessee Valley administration pointing out that the TVA had been caught without power capacity for the production of needed aluminum in the national emergency.

The chances that the Senate airing of the third-term issue will be confined chiefly to the Burke proposal were increased with indications that Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, strong isolationist, had abandoned plans to press his anti-third term resolution. It was understood that Senator Holt felt he did not agree with the foreign policies of Willkie, the Republican candidate, any more than he did with those of the President, and these had been one of the main reasons for his resolution.

The 16 Democratic Senators who will be invited to appear before the Senate Judicial subcommittee are Senators Ashurst, of Arizona; Barkley, of Kentucky; Gerry, of Rhode Island; Glass, of Virginia; Harrison, of Mississippi; Hayden, of Arizona; King, of Utah; McKellar, of Tennessee; Neeley, of West Virginia; Pittman, of Nevada; Sheppard, of Texas; Smith, of South Carolina; Thomas, of Oklahoma; Tydings, of of Maryland; Wagner, of New York, and Wheeler, of Montana.

"Cheap Publicity Stunt"

Bridges criticized Mr. Roosevelt's surveys as "another cheap publicity stunt to make political capital out of national defense," and added:

"This activity serves two vital political purposes. First, it is intended to divert attention in this campaign year from his most vulnerable point, the collapse of his domestic program due to his own incompetent leadership. And, second, it also provides him an alibi—a poor one, but his own withal—for running away from a free and fair discussion of the issues of this campaign with his opponent, Wendell Willkie.

"Tomorrow as another gesture toward the political build-up, Mr. Roosevelt is going to make a Labor Day dedication of some TVA dams. . . . If Mr. Roosevelt does not change his speech after reading this, he probably will fervently pat himself on the back for providing the Nation with that great source of water power for national defense.

TVA Caught Short

"Will Mr. Roosevelt explain why TVA had purchased so large a market that it was caught short with nothing left for the increased manufacture of aluminum when he suddenly woke up to America's need for airplanes?

"Will Mr. Roosevelt explain why TVA stated that it required 14,000 kilowatts of new capacity to supply a powder-making plant to be built at Memphis, when as a matter of truth—which TVA well knew—that plant by the very process of powder manufacture requires so much steam that it will supply its own powder requirements from its own steam plant?

"Will he explain that this plant will be practically independent of TVA for power—and that TVA officials knew this when they included that fake figure? . . ."

D. C. Marines Lauded For War Game Record

Fifth Battalion Reviewed on Return By Rep. Woodrum

Home from two weeks in the field, Washington's Fifth Battalion Fleet Marine Reserve, stepped from a special train at Union Station yesterday and three hours later had disintegrated into 360 civilians.

In those three hours, the battalion detrained, marched from the station to its barracks at Sixth street and Indiana avenue, was inspected by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, underwent medical examination and drew its pay. Its return was a model of military precision.

"The boys are taking things seriously," said Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, battalion commander. "You don't see any clowning or horseplay and they went through 15 days of the best field training they've ever had."

Record Is Praised

With 35 per cent recruits, Miller said, the battalion completed its training with "remarkably little sickness." In addition to undertaking field maneuvers by day and night, he added, and receiving training with machine guns, Stokes mortars and other heavy weapons borrowed from regulars, it fired for record "in the worst possible kind of weather" and qualified 49 per cent of its members.

Attached to the battalion was Company G, Twenty-third Battalion, of Roanoke, Va.

At the station the train was met by Representative Woodrum, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and Col. Joseph C. Fegan, U. S. M. C., director, U. S. Marine Corps Reserve. Woodrum, busy with a small movie camera, paused long enough to greet his son, Lieut. Clifton A. Woodrum, jr., of Company D.

Inspected by Woodrum

Marching from the train to its armory, the battalion formed and was inspected by Woodrum. Then Col. Miller called officers and ranking noncommissioned officers to the front and thanked each for his part in the maneuvers.

Ordinarily trained at Quantico, Va., the Fifth this year trained at the Naval Air Station, Lakehurst, N. J. Plans were changed at the last minute when storm damage to Marine barracks at Parris Island, S. C., forced transfer of troops from there to Quantico.

Britain Wants U. S. Destroyers To Blockade Innocent, Forum Told

'Only Way to Starve Hitler,' Is Answer To Air Forum Charge

A declaration by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, that England wants 50 destroyers from the United States "to carry out her blockade of the innocent women and children of Europe" precipitated a lively debate last night on "The American Forum of the Air" broadcast from Washington.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, replied that it could not be helped. It is the only way to starve Hitler, he said.

He was joined by Edgar Ansel Mowrer, American war correspondent now collaborating with Col. William J. Donovan in a newspaper series on the Fifth Column, in advocating destroyers for Britain as a self-defense move.

Dr. Frederick J. Libby, founder and head of the National Council for the Prevention of War, argued the step would be contrary to domestic and international law.

Senator Lee suggested sale of the destroyers to private concerns for resale to England as a means of keeping within the law.

"Yes," returned Johnson, "we can beat the devil around the bush."

"And we'll have the devil to beat if England loses," declared Lee.

The debate, originating in the Willard Hotel, was heard over WOL and the Mutual Broadcasting System. Columnist Theodore Granick presided.

Military School Student Brings Boy, 4, Back to Life

Child Wades Above Depth, Youth Applies Artificial Respiration Beside Pool at Carroll Springs Inn

First-aid knowledge learned at military school by 13-year-old Gordon "Mickey" Brummel yesterday enabled him to save the life of 4-year-old Jerry Johnson, of Cleveland, Ohio, visiting with his parents at Carroll Springs Inn, Forest Glen, Md.

The Johnson child had wandered across the spacious lawn of the inn, which formerly was the home of Nancy Carroll, who was related to the first Catholic archbishop in America, to a swimming pool in the back. He waded into the water but soon was beyond his depth.

Micky and a companion, Richard Fyler, 10, both of whom live at the inn, said they saw what looked like a large piece of paper on the pool. Going closer they saw it was the child. They waded in over their waists and pulled Jerry to the rim of the pool.

Mickey then laid the boy face down and began giving artificial respiration, forcing water from the child's lungs.

"The water poured out like from a hose," Mickey said. "I carried him up to the house with his head hanging down so the water would run out after I heard him grunting."

The Silver Spring Rescue Squad was called and completed the treatment. Dr. Kenneth Laughlin, of Silver Spring ordered the boy wrapped in blankets and kept quiet for two days. Jerry was believed out of danger last night.

Mickey attended Randolph Macon Military Academy until several months before the last school term when he transferred to Immaculate Conception Academy in Washington. He bashfully admitted that he had learned the rudiments of first aid at school but wasn't much impressed by the stunt.

U. S. Alien Population Shows Decline

Justice Dept. Says Number Is Almost Halved Since 1930

Using "all available data," the Department of Justice estimated yesterday there were 3,595,338 aliens in the United States as compared with 6,284,613 in 1930.

In Washington there are 7,018, against a 1930 alien population of 11,529, the department disclosed in a memorandum handed out by its Alien Registration Division in connection with the current registration and fingerprinting of aliens.

Each week during the registration, Justice officials said, a chart showing the progress of the work will be issued.

Yesterday's estimates showed the greatest concentration of aliens to be in the Middle Atlantic States, with an estimated 979,431 living in New York City.

Other large cities were listed as Chicago, 288,999; Philadelphia, 116,567; Detroit, 227,261; Los Angeles, 85,127; Cleveland, 98,614; St. Louis, 27,488; Boston, 115,849; Baltimore, 30,100; Pittsburgh, 30,769, and San Francisco, 65,067.

Memorial from 9 a. m. to 9:30 p. m.

A mild flurry of statements preceded the day.

"Will American labor fall for false defense, as German, French and British Labor fell?" inquired the People's Lobby, Inc., 1410 H street northwest.

"Strong labor movements in France, Germany and Britain failed to achieve freedom. They gave only lip service to a socialized economy for abundance. They gave pressure service, as many unionists here do, to a slightly larger share of the swag of a profit system of scarcity and higher prices," the lobby said.

How Dictators Rose

"Hitler and Mussolini came to power largely because of policies to which the old guard of the labor movement in America still clings," the statement added.

The American Security Union, said David Lasser, president, was ready "to assume its duty of protecting the millions of unemployed and WPA workers . . . and protecting our democracy and Nation. Born out of a revolt within the ranks of the underprivileged against Communist domination of the unemployed movement," the A. S. U., he said, "stands four-square for organization based on American principles, American leadership and opposition to all subversive groups."

It's obligation "is to fight the stealthy attempts at appeasement of the dictators that led to collapse of democracy abroad," Lasser added.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia will celebrate at an all-day outing today at Club Del Rio, on the South River, near Annapolis, Md. Participating will be 36 C. I. O. locals here.

20,000 Tickets Out

There will be swimming, boating, fishing and various games. Ten thousand tickets have been distributed. An amplifying system will carry a Labor Day speech by John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, to all parts of the picnic grounds. Special buses will carry C. I. O. members to the picnic grounds, leaving from Fifteenth and H streets northeast, at 10 a. m.

A dress parade and band concert scheduled to be held today at the Marine Corps barracks has been cancelled.

The weather bureau said there was no outlook for rain, raising the opportunity for thousands of motorists to visit beaches and resorts.

Aviation Gasoline Is Being Shipped To Japan Again

Copyright by New York Times

Austin, Tex., Sept. 1.—Aviation gasoline is again moving in large quantities from Texas through Gulf ports to Japan and other foreign countries after an almost complete suspension of shipments following the Government embargo of July 27.

According to advices received by the Railroad Commission, a cargo of 770,000 gallons of aviation gasoline has been loaded aboard a Norwegian freighter at Houston for delivery in Japan. Government approval has been given, it is stated, for the export of additional cargoes up to 1,000,000 barrels to Japan.

Explanation of the liberalizing of the embargo is unofficially given as being due to the Anglo-Iran Oil Co., British owned, taking advantage of the United States embargo by selling aviation gasoline and crude oil to Japan.

Protests were made to Washington by major American producers against the action of the British concern and relaxation of the embargo followed.

What the Draft Means to You

Year Needed to Train Draftees for Battle

In Case of Invasion, Regulars Would Be Used as Far as Possible Until New Troops Were Sufficiently Prepared

(Editor's Note: With conscription a certainty, The Post is presenting a series designed to answer everyone's questions about the effect of the draft on him. The series is based on legislation that has passed the Senate and on the plans drawn up by selective service specialists since the World War. This is the ninth article. Questions are invited.)

Reluctant to answer a peacetime draft today are thousands of citizens who would gladly strike a direct blow for their country should an emergency arise. Thousands of others have schooled themselves for that opportunity.

For the semitrained C. M. T. C. soldier, as much as the man who has never seen a rifle, conscription has raised many issues. Some follow:

What are the conscript's chances of seeing actual fighting?

This, of course, depends on future eventualities. "We hope they never have to fight," an Army officer said last night. "That is exactly why we want conscription—to prevent war."

But should war come, Army men say this important factor will be taken into consideration: At least a year is necessary to get a man ready for battle.

Suppose this country were invaded in six months (conscripts cannot be sent anywhere outside of the Western Hemisphere, American possessions, the Canal Zone and the Philippines, according to the Senate measure.

Since the draftees would then be only half trained, the Army high command would attempt to keep them out of the combat zone at least until they had finished the equivalent of a year's drilling, according to military strategists.

The regular troops would go first. When absolutely necessary, trainees would be sent in as replacements. If the war were still raging at the end of six months, when the conscripts had the minimum training necessary for battle, then they would be hurled into combat along with the seasoned troops.

An Army officer pointed out, however, that the trainees would at first be brigaded with regular Army or National Guard units. Should these particular units be called on, the high command would face the problem of breaking up tactical combat groups and reorganizing them at the eleventh hour, or sending green troops into battle.

The latter possibility is why service people are praying now for quick enactment of the draft bill.

Will men who have spent three summers at C. M. T. C. camps, and only need one more encampment to be eligible for a commission, be exempt along with advanced R. O. T. C. students.

No C. M. T. C. men are subject to registration, although they may be deferred because their past training would be largely duplicated at a conscript camp.

An R. O. T. C. spokesman said some special arrangement might be worked out whereby C. M. T. C. men who had completed the "white" (three-year) course might complete their training for a commission at a winter session.

When will the first men actually reach the training camps?

According to a precisely timed schedule of the Joint Army-Navy Selective Service Committee, two weeks will elapse before registration after the President signs the bill and 32 days before the selection boards are ready to pick candidates for class 1; the expected 4,500,000 available for induction.

Two months will pass before the gigantic and necessarily slow-starting machinery will have turned out its first citizen-soldiers at the training camps, it is expected.

In the meantime, the three service branches will continue intensive recruiting. (In the 1917 draft, with this country already at war, the stop-gap volunteers were particularly important.

Will no aliens be called?

The bill passed by the Senate limits aliens subject to conscription to those who have "declared intention of becoming citizen;" in other words, those who have taken out first papers.

But, in the World War, despite this same limitation, many undeclared aliens were drafted. This occurred because selection boards did not know they were aliens, or overlooked the regulation because of the draftee's recognized patriotism. Today, with the current registratoin of aliens for possible sabotage reasons, they will be more easily identified.

(Tomorrow The Post will discuss the conscript's possibility of retaining his vote.)

Luther League Drama Draws 200 Young Folk

Maryland Group Sees Play Depicting Search For Spirit of Christ

Nearly 200 young people last night witnessed a drama depicting "A Search for the Spirit of Christ" at the National City Christian Church parish hall, where the Luther League of Maryland held an evening session of its nineteenth annual convention.

The drama, entitled "The Sorrowful Star," was presented by members of the Washington District Luther League under the direction of the Rev. Frederick J. Eckert. Written by Dorothy C. Wilson, it told the story of two angels who revisited the earth in search of Christ's teachings, and found only war, poverty and tribulation until the work of several Christian leaders was revealed.

Sessions of the convention, which opened Saturday and will continue through this evening, are being held at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas circle.

The Rev. Lewis Koon spoke on "I Am the Way" at a morning service yesterday. At the afternoon session the Rev. Carl W. Folkemer and Frances B. Miller conducted discussions.

Today's session will open with a dawn service at the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument, at 6:30 a. m. The Rev. Harvey D. Hoover will speak on "I Am the Light.'" There will be meetings at the Luther Place Memorial Church at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m.. The convention will close with a candlelight installation service at the church at 6 p. m.

D. C. De Molays At Convention In Maryland

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Md., Sept. 1.—Approximately 200 De Molays from Maryland, Pennsylvania and Washington, D. C., received the keys to Cambridge from Mayor Irving B. Jackson today and made ready for two days of pleasure.

The occasion was the eighth annual Maryland State conclave. The visitors began arriving this morning and registration started at 2 p. m., after which they assembled in municipal park to be welcomed by the mayor. John H. Zink, De Molay State deputy, of Baltimore, is attending.

The Rev. T. C. Mulligan conducted a vesper service at St. Paul's Methodist Protestant Church in late afternoon. A sailing party was planned for the evening on the Choptank River.

The business session tomorrow morning is the only serious note on the second-day program, for the afternoon will be given to a luncheon and various sporting activities.

Senator George Radcliffe will speak at a banquet tomorrow night. A dance at the Cambridge Armory, at which "Miss De Molay of Maryland" will be chosen, will close the conclave. Young women representing the various chapters will vie for the honor.

Warsaw, Ind., Sept. 1 (AP).—The National Conference of Methodist Youth today voted to withdraw from the American Youth Congress because its policies have become "inconsistent" and "dangerous to the causes which the congress purposed to serve."

(The congress has been accused of communistic inclintations by many critics.)

Labor to Fight Only in U. S., Rally Told

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Delegates to the "Emergency Peace Mobilization" conducted a marching demonstration in the Chicago stadium today after one speaker asserted that "American labor will rise and fight as one man if America is invaded—but we will fight only on American soil."

The speaker, Michael J. Quill, of New York, president of the C. I. O. Transport Workers Union, added that "we will not be drawn into any war in Europe or South America to make profits for Wall Street."

Delegates voted to set up "a nonprofit organization to be known as the American Peace Mobilization," and to form volunteer "peace committees" in their own communities. These committees were asked to meet on or about September 21 to present a "program of action."

To Fight Conscription

The group also voted to fight conscription, "restore the Bill of Rights," and to "restore full rights to foreign-born."

Joseph Curren, president of the National Maritime Union and chairman of today's session, asked each State delegation to designate individuals to go to Washington Tuesday to express their views on conscription to Congress.

Morris Watson, chairman of the credentials committee, announced that 4,198 delegates and 1,435 "observers" were registered at the meeting from 40 States and the District of Columbia.

Sponsored by the Committee to Defend America by Keeping Out of War, the meeting had been attacked as "Communist-inspired" by several organizations, including the national labor committee of the Socialist Party and the National Foundation for American Youth, a "pro-American" group backed by the former heavyweight champion, Gene Tunney.

Speakers Cancel

Following the attacks, Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota; Senator D. Worth Clark (Democrat), Idaho, and several others canceled their scheduled speeches.

Speakers today included Dr. Max Yergan, of New York, chairman of the National Negro Congress; Anthony S. McCarthy, of Los Angeles, director of war veterans in Labor's Nonpartisan League, and Eugene P. Connolly, of New York, an official of the American Labor Party.

The meeting, which began yesterday afternoon, will be concluded tomorrow noon.

Sodality Union Retreat Hears Father Devereux

"The solution for the chaos in Europe is the reinstatement of God to that place owed him by his creatures," the Rev. Atlee F. X. Devereux yesterday told the retreat being held by the Washington Sodality Union.

The retreat, attended by 36 women of 18 Washington parishes, began Saturday and will continue until 7:30 p. m. today at 4000 Harewood road northeast.

Europe, since the French Revolution, has denied the sovereignty of God and has made the state supreme, Father Devereux said. "The American Revolution was more blessed because our founding fathers were thoroughly Christian minded," he said.

Dr. J. R. Edwards Sees Nazi Threat To U. S.; Backs Draft

The threat of a "military mind" in American youth is the greatest danger in conscription, Dr. John R. Edwards last night told an audience at Union Methodist Church.

Americans are concerned about conscription "because the memory of the World War is still strong in us," Dr. Edwards said. "People realize that if there's anything worse than hell it's war. . . . But we must have preparation, and the best way appears to be conscription."

He declared that "Germany is trying to get even with her enemies in the last war. And Germany does not forget America's part in that war. . . . Our time is surely coming. It is near to us."

Bodies Identified In Plane Crash

Fingerprints Only Clew to Some Mangled Victims

The human wreckage of the Nation's worst commercial air disaster began streaming into Washington last night after relatives, FBI agents and airline officials completed identification of the 25 mutilated victims of the plane crash.

The body of Senator Ernest Lundeen was the first to reach the Capital from the small, marble, ivy-covered chapel in Leesburg's Union Cemetery where the remains, brought from the scene of the crash by ambulance, truck and car, were partially assembled.

A crew of morticians under Loudoun County Coroner John Gibson worked feverishly through the night to prepare the tragic forms for identification. But, so violent had the crash been that few of the torn bodies were recognizable.

Only Five Recognizable

Almost a hundred friends and relatives of the 25 dead shuffled through the grim chapel scene during the day to claim their own, but only five of the victims were identified in this process.

The four crew members, including the pretty hostess, Margaret Carson, and seven others, all Government employes, were picked out laboriously by a score of FBI agents with the aid of Department of Justice fingerprint records.

The agents untangled two cases in each of which relatives of the deceased entered conflicting claims for the remains of an individual victim, each group claiming the dead person as their relative. Fingerprints provided the conclusive evidence to clarify the grisly situations.

In another case, a latent fingerprint on a medicine bottle in the home of one victim was taken to compare with his post-mortem prints as a means of establishing his identity.

In all cases glycerin had to be injected into the fingers of the victims to make the skin ridges visible in the prints. This was because of shrivelling of the skin, exposed overnight in the rain.

One victim was identified by a lone shoe, another by a battered wrist watch, a third by a dental plate. Pocketbooks, handkerchiefs, hats, jewelry and shreds of clothing were other clews utilized to complete the macabre inventory.

Identified by Fingerprints

Fingerprints of Senator Lundeen, made when he was a soldier in the Spanish-American War, served to identify his mangled body. The prints were in the FBI's voluminous files.

Senator Lundeen's remains were brought to Hysong's funeral home here while arrangements were made for Senate and House committees to escort the body of the Minnesota Farmer-Laborite to a State funeral in St. Paul, Minn., Wednesday.

At least nine other bodies, sealed in metal coffins, had arrived in Washington last night, six in preparation for shipment to various parts of the country. Five bodies remained in the Union Cemetery chapel; seven others will be shipped today from Slack's funeral home in Leesburg.

Undaunted by the crash, which snuffed out the lives of their dear ones, almost a score of friends and relatives of the victims took to the air yesterday to reach Leesburg.

13 Ride Planes

Thirteen accepted free plane transportation from Pennsylvania Central Airlines in sister ships of the two-motored Douglas "death ship," which smashed into the Blue Ridge Mountain foothills Saturday. Three, the father and two cousins of Miss Evelyn Goldsmith, of 1200 Euclid street northwest, arrived in Washington on an Eastern Airlines plane from New York.

Six P. C. A. cars transported them to Leesburg, past the scene of the accident near Lovettsville, then brought them back to Washington for airplane return to their homes in Detroit, Mich.; Akron, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio, and Pittsburgh.

By last night, six had boarded P. C. A. planes at Washington Airport for Pittsburgh, a trip that saw them traversing the same route as the tragic "Flight 19" Saturday.

These included Edward Carson, father of the 22-year-old hostess, and a friend, the Rev. R. B. Johnson, of Pittsburgh, who left on the 5:20 p. m. plane. R. C. Moore, a brother of the co-pilot, J. Paul Moore, and Ralph Sebring, a cousin of the flyer, joined Mr. and Mrs. David Tarr, of Akron, Ohio, the parents of another victim, on the 8:40 p. m. plane.

The mother and a brother of Miss Chloe Post, 23-year-old Civil Service Commission employe, took the 5:15 p. m. plane at Washington Airport for Cleveland.

From Detroit yesterday morning on a P. C. A. plane came Lewis Deschler, of Bethesda, Md., parliamentarian of the House of Representatives, a son-in-law of Dr. Charles D. Cole, of 5305 Forty-first street northwest, who perished in the crash.

Congress Colleagues to Attend Funeral for Senator Lundeen

Senate and House Delegations Leaving Today; Relatives of Other Plane-Crash Victims Arrange Last Rites and Burials

Grief-stricken relatives of the 25 victims of Saturday's air disaster made arrangements yesterday for funerals.

Congressional committees were appointed to attend the services for Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, at Fort Snelling National Cemetery, near Minneapolis, at 3 p. m. Wednesday.

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, was named to head the Senate committee, and Speaker Bankhead appointed Representative Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, as chairman of the House group.

Other committee members are Senators Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado; Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Murray (Democrat), of Montana. Three other Representatives will be appointed today.

Military Services

The funeral party will leave Union Station at 5:10 o'clock this afternoon and arrive in St. Paul tomorrow night. The Senator's body will lie in state in the Minnesota capitol until the funeral. It will be a military service, in recognition of Lundeen's services as a private in the Spanish-American War and as an officer in the National Guard.

Lundeen was bound for Minneapolis to make a neutrality speech when the Pennsylvania Central airliner crashed in Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountain country, carrying all aboard to their death.

Funeral services for Dr. Charles D. Cole, a dentist here for 25 years and former president of the Washington Dental Association, who was en route to a professional meeting in Detroit on the ill-fated plane, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Gawler funeral home, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Burial will be private.

Dr. Cole is survived by his wife, Mrs. Henrietta Chase Cole, and a daughter, Mrs. Lewis Deschler.

Rites for Elliot

Alfred H. Elliot, of 3757 McKinley street northwest, who was on his way to Butler, Pa., to see his wife, will be buried at Butler following funeral services at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Pumphrey funeral home, 7005 Wisconsin avenue, Bethesda, Md. His wife, Mrs. Gretchen Zimmerman Elliot, survives.

The body of Capt. Lowell Scroggins, pilot of the plane, was shipped from Leesburg yesterday to Richmond, Calif. He lived here at 3051 Idaho avenue northwest.

With remains of five other victims, the body of John Paul Moore, 29, of 1810 North Danville street, Arlington, Va., copilot of the plane, was brought to Lee's funeral home here for cremation. His ashes will be sent to Caldwell, Ohio, for funeral services and burial.

Others brought to Lee funeral home were Dr. Willard M. Burleson, of Richmond, Va.; Miss Chloe Post, 23, of 1739 Kilbourne place northwest, a Civil Service Commission employe; John R. Staire, jr., 1526 Eighteenth street northwest, a Pennsylvania Central Airlines traffic manager; Mrs. Ralph M. Hale, Pittsburgh, and Miss Evelyn Goldsmith, 25, of 1200 Euclid street northwest, Rural Electrification Administration employe.

Dr. Burleson's ashes will be shipped to East Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss Post's to Minerva, Ohio, and Staire's to Jare, W. Va., for funeral and burial.

The body of William Garbose, Department of Justice attorney, who lived here at 910 E street northwest, was shipped by Danzansky's funeral home last night to Worcester, Mass., for funeral and burial.

Brought to Hysong's funeral home here, the remains of Michael P. Mahan, 28-year-old internal revenue agent, will be shipped to Chicago, his home, today.

Shipped from Leesburg yesterday for burial were the bodies of D. P. Janes, Interstate Commerce Commission employe, to Des Moines, Iowa; A. Halloway, ICC employe, of Holdenville, Okla., to Oklahoma City; Miss Margaret L. Turner, of 1426 Twenty-first street northwest, a Federal Bureau of Investigation stenographer, to Huddlesville, Va., and Joseph James Pesci, 31-year-old FBI agent, to Blairsville, Pa., his home.

Congress Inquiry Sought in Crash and skimming 100 feet over the earth, breaking up as it rolled.

In Washington, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who led a bitter fight against reorganization of the CAA, charged "inefficiency and chaos" in the Civil Aeronautics Board were responsible for the tragedy. He said he was considering asking a Senate investigation.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of a special subcommittee on air safety of the Senate Commerce Committee, said he would decide whether to ask for an appropriation to cover an invetsigation by his committe eafter accumulating all "primary facts." His subcommittee was formed to investigate a crash in February, 1935, which took the life of Senator Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico.

"I believe that if any question of air safety regulations is involved," said Clark, the Senate would want an investigation. But if the plane was struck by lightning—and first reports would indicate there was a 50-50 chance of this—that would be an act of God beyond anybody's control."

Another investigation, meanwhile, was being carried on by officials of the airline, headed by its president, C. Bedell Monro. The plane, he said, was 'out of control" when it crashed and struck the ground at a sharp angle.

"What caused the airplane to be descending at an unorthodox angle," he declared, "and at such speed has not been determined.

"One conclusion that can be reached is that the airplane was out of control when it made contact with the ground, inasmuch as the character of the terrain is such that it was possible to make an emergency landing with only minor damage."

Coast Defenses Of Canada About Complete

Heavy Guns Command Entrances to All Important Harbors

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 1.—Back from a survey of the Atlantic coast fortifications, Canadian members of the International Defense Commission worked over the week-end drafting the report which will be presented at the next meeting of the commission on September 9, in Washington.

Their findings are being kept a close secret. From other military sources the following information on the coastal defense situation was authorized:

The defense system started before war broke out has been tremendously extended and is now virtually complete. Heavy guns command the entrances to all important harbors. There are a series of forts built of massive concrete.

These forts have been coordinated by carefully planned defensive lines. Machine gun emplacements command all likely landing spots.

There are 13,000 men on coastal defense duty without counting air force and naval units and reserves. In addition to the coastal defense forces the Third Division is moving into the Maritime Provinces to complete its training. The movement will be completed in a little over a month.

Air Defense System

There are antiaircraft batteries and searchlight batteries in the Maritimes as well as heavy coastal guns and field artillery. An air raid warning system has been set up.

Air bases and naval bases in the region are large enough to be shared with the United States. The main airport in Newfoundland has a total paved space equivalent to a 20-foot highway extending 120 miles. The runways are 1,000 feet wide, making it possible for planes to land sideways.

The air force concentrated squadrons along the Atlantic coast when was was declared and they have been on patrol duty ever since. No information is being given on the number of squadrons on duty or the types of planes they fly. The air force has assisted the Navy in convoy duty for a year.

Canada's navy has grown more spectacularly than any other service and now numbers 125 vessels. Harbors are fortified with nets, booms and mine fields. Halifax has become one of the great naval bases of the world.

No Shift of Burden

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (INS).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King tonight declared that under the recently concluded United States-Canadian defense pact neither country seeks to shift to the other the burden of maintaining its security.

"We have recognized that our united strength will be something more than the strength of each acting separately," he said in a radio address. "Reciprocity in defense involves reciprocal duties as well as reciprocal advantages. Canada gladly accepts both.

"Canada has indeed become the bridge which joins the new freedom of the North American Continent with the ancient freedom of Britain."

Knox to Inspect Fleet at Hawaii, West Coast Bases

Copyright by New York Times

Secretary of the Navy Knox will leave this week by air for an inspection of the United States fleet at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and the naval establishment at that harbor and on the west coast. He will not return to the Capitol until September 18.

He will be accompanied by Col. William J. Donovan, who recently concluded a naval mission for him in London, his aide, Capt. M. L. Dayo, and by John O'Keefe, special assistant to the Secretary.

Rear Adm. A. B. Cooke, commander of the aircraft scouting force, will make the flight with him from the west coast to Pearl Harbor and return; Adm. Cooke's flagship, a four-engined consolidated patrol plane, will be used on this part of the trip.

DeLancey Gill, Ethnologist, 81, Killed in Fall

Found Lying With Head Against Hearth In Alexandria Home

DeLancey Gill, 81, ethnologist and painter, was killed when he fell on a stair Saturday at his home, 137 Fairfax avenue, Alexandria Va.

He was discovered Saturday morning by a neighbor, William Mason, lying with his head on a stone hearth where he apparently had fallen from a landing. Dr. Llewellyn Powell, city coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death from a fractured skull.

Mr. Gill lived in Washington until his retirement from Government service eight years ago. He was one of the original members of the Bureau of American Ethnology formed in 1884 and developed and classified more than half of the bureau's collection of 15,000 photographs of Indian subjects.

From 1889 to 1891 he worked in the field searching out sites of Indian villages and quarries and by his discoveries in the latter field established a new classification of certain Indian artifacts. He explored the deserts of Arizona, lower California and Sonora, Mexico, and in 1900 followed the old Yume trail for 300 miles from Mexico to the Colorado River.

For many years he was with the illustrations branch of the Smithsonian Institution and served with the map section of the Geological Survey. As a painter he was widely known and supplied many illustrations in reports of the Smithsonian and of the National Museum.

He had been a member of the Cosmos Club, the Association of Oldest Inhabitants and once was active in the old Capital Bicycle Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Kathrine Schley Gill; two daughters, Mrs. Edward Lloyd and Mrs. Nicholas Webster, of Washington, and three sons, Maj. Robert F. Gill, United States Army; William H. Gill and Wilbur Gill.

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 1 (INS).—Two persons were drowned today as torrential rains inundated the lower part of the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula, causing thousands of dollars property damage.

Flood waters from a broken dam at Lake Como resulted in the death of Clarence Armstrong, 55, a linesman for the Diamond State Telephone Co., as he attempted to repair a broken line from a rowboat. A companion was rescued.

The second drowning victim was Bernard Jackett, 30, Wilmington, who met death in the Christina River despite efforts of his brother, Anthony, to rescue him from a rowboat.

Iron and Steel Exports Rising

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that exports of iron and steel, excluding scrap, had increased in July for the third consecutive month to a total of 707,809 gross tons valued at $39,511,996.

In the same month, the department said, automobile exports declined to $15,425,218, or 17.1 per cent below the June total of $18,624,783. The July figure was the lowest since September, 1939.

The iron and steel July export total of 707,809 tons compared with June exports of 617,678 tons and July, 1939, shipments of 163,398 tons.

French Engineer Planning Self-Supporting Colony Here

Community in Virginia Designed For 25 Young Couples Willing to Work; Norwegian Refugees Invited in Meantime

A former French building engineer, now living in Washington, is planning a "self-supporting community" in nearby Virginia for 25 young married couples with a will to work.

And the Frenchman, Louis A. Montague, now a naturalized American, disclosed last night he had invited four Norwegian soldiers, who crossed the Atlantic recently in a 38-foot sloop, to be his guests there in the meantime.

Montague, who lives at the Shoreham Hotel, built and owns the Normandy Office Building here and holds considerably more real estate here and in Virginia.

30 Miles From Washington

The 150-acre tract where he plans his community is about 30 miles from Washington on the Lee highway between here and Warrenton.

Reluctant to disclose how the community would operate, because plans have not yet progressed very far, he said only that it would not be agricultural.

After attempting unsuccessfully to reach the Norwegians through the legation here and the consulate in New York, he sent them a telegram offering them a home on the development, without charge, and they were reached by Western Union aboard their 23-year-old sloop in New York Harbor.

Admires Norsemen

Montague said he expected it could be arranged for them to obtain temporary visas for admittance into the country.

"I have a lot of admiration for those men," he said. "They're just the sort I want for my community."

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PATH OF STORM—Map indicates general path of hurricane moving along the coast north of Long Island, struck two years ago by high winds that killed scores. Coast Guard warnings said that if the storm struck Long Island, it would most likely hit between Fire Island and Montauk Point

England coast early today, and authorities were fearful that the full force of the storm might swerve inland as it did in 1938.

Storm warnings were raised from Boston to Eastport, Me., and small craft were advised to seek shelter between New York and the Delaware Breakwater.

Heeding the warnings of the authorities, hundreds of dwellers along Long Island coast between College Point and Montauk left for safer quarters, and legionnaires, firemen, as well as the Coast Guard and police were ordered to stand prepared for possible emergency work.

Rhode Island, where 312 died in the hurricane of 1938, was prepared to call out the National Guard should the storm hit the little State again. Along a 50-mile stretch of beaches, State police evacuated waterfront cottages. In some communities, firemen in trucks cruised the streets with sirens screaming, spreading the alarm.

At Carpenters Beach, R. I., a colony of more than 1,000 families—trailer and tent dwellers—was ordered to move out. Massachusetts State troopers kept a close watch along Cape Cod.

Gales Spread 200 Miles

The Weather Bureau pointed out that the hurricanes covered a small area around the storm center, but that shifting gales spread out for about 200 miles in all directions.

Meanwhile, torrential rainstorms flooded central and southern New Jersey, leaving more than 10,000 homeless and four known dead.

Washington, peculiarly enough, had its pleasantest day in about three weeks, as the long rainy period ended—at least for the day—and a warm sun came out. Fair and cooler is the outlook for today and tomorrow.

Cup of Tea Saves R. A. F. Pilot As Nazis Attack for Revenge

By Frank R. Kelley

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

An Airdrome in Southeast England, Sept. 1.—A cup of tea saved a young British Hurricane pilot from Nazi vengeance here this afternoon when three Messerschmitts, painted with British markings which fooled ground defenses, swept in and bombed his machine on which four mechanics were doing a minor job of repairs in a corner of the field.

Jagged pieces from a shrapnel bomb which ripped into the ground 30 fete from the parked Hurricane killed one mechanic instantly, injured another and tore one wing and the fuselage from the plane. A few minutes earlier the pilot had landed to have an oil leak plugged up after shooting down a Dornier 117 near the coast.

He had intended to wait in the cockpit while the mechanics worked on his plane, but instead accepted the commanding officer's offer of a cup of tea. It probably saved him from death or serious injury.

An airdrome official told this correspondent as he inspected the damaged Hurricane that the three raiders bore innocent-looking red, white and blue circles. The swiftly diving Nazis were on the airdrome in a flash. They dropped their bombs and darted away before the ground crews could recover from their surprise.

The blond Yorkshire-born pilot of the Hurricane, who joined the R. A. F. in 1929 and fought in France until the evacuation of Dunkerque, made plans to get back to his station tonight to pick up another machine. As we drove him into Folkestone to catch a train for London, he told of his day in the air.

With 11 other Hurricanes of his squadron he was patrolling south of London this afternoon when a formation of 63 German bombers, escorted by 200 fighters, approached, apparently hoping for a fling at airdromes near the capital. The outnumbered Hurricanes sailed into the swarm of raiders and broke them up.

The pilot said he got in two bursts from his eight machine guns at two bombers, then turned and tackled a lone Dornier. He trailed it toward the southeast coast, then closed in and saw it crash in flames into marshland. It was the twenty-second enemy plane he had knocked down.

Then with oil pressure dropping to zero and a gash from a cannon shot in his starboard wing, the Hurricane pilot came down at this field for repairs.

Four days ago he shot down another enemy plane on the Southend Airdrome, Essex. He said that one of the German crew said he had come over England on 101 occasions and would like to do so 101 more times. Then he explained that he wanted to avenge the damage done by British bombers in his native city of Cologne, where, according to the Nazi, blazing oil from tanks fired in the hills ran in rivers into the city and burned up part of it.

29th Division Veterans Name Commander

Association Urges Retirement of Labor Secretary Perkins

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 1.—H. D. Jones, of Graham, N. C., was elected national commander of the Twenty-ninth Division Association in a stormy balloting session that began at 10 a. m. today and lasted 3½ hours. Thomas D. Boone, of Norfolk, Virginia department vice commander, was the only other nominee.

Other officers elected were Harold A. Lewis, Jersey City, vice commander for New Jersey; Harry E. Shilling, Washington, vice commander for the District of Columbia; Earl Jones, Staunton, vice commander for Virginia; Earnest C. Merkel, Baltimore, vice commander for Maryland; Francis S. Kemp, Roanoke Rapids, N. C., vice commander at large; Russell C. Freeman, Washington, finance officer; William Sinsky, Baltimore, judge advocate; Gen. George Washington Bowie, jr., Baltimore, historian; Arthur Smith, Totowa Boro, N. J., welfare officer; Herman Hinners, Jersey City, sergeant-at-arms; Col. Herbert C. Bland, M. D., Baltimore, Md., surgeon; John Torzewski, Irvington, N. J., L. L. Childs, Baltimore, Lee Perrin, Washington, H. E. McCoy, Norfolk, and Walter R. Given, East Liverpool, Ohio, national executive committeemen, and William S. Nicklas, Baltimore, adjutant.

An invitation from the Washington groups to hold the 1941 convention in that city was turned over to the executive committee for future action. John Kim, of Newark, retiring sergeant-at-arms, was appointed national color sergeant by the new commander.

Retirement of Secretary of Labor Perkins and immediate deportation of Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader, were demanded in a resolution adopted today. The measure charged that Mrs. Perkins "has heretofore protected known advocates operating as Fifth Columnists," naming specifically Bridges, whom the resolution termed a "self-confessed Red."

Gen. Pershing's recommendation to Congress for delivery of 50 obsolete destroyers to Great Britain was indorsed.

Row May Keep Some Virginia Schools Shut

New Market, Va., Sept. 1.—According to Dr. Sidney B. Hall, chairman of the Virginia State board of education, the deadlock in public school affairs, which seemed solved the middle of the week, remains and no basis has been reached upon which the schools can be opened.

Through the summer the two Shenandoah County boards have been opposed on the issue of more revenue for the operation of the schools. On April 1 the school board requested an increase in the levy or additional funds for the operation of the schools, which was denied. In a series of meetings various compromises were offered and in recent weeks citizen groups have been putting pressure on both boards for a solution.

Dr. Hall told the Shenandoah County school officials that no State funds would be available until the board of supervisors made adequate and specific appropriations. The middle of the week resolution carried a proviso that the last $6,850 was to be paid on or before June 10 and after a nine-month term had been completed. Dr. Hall said all county tax and special fund allocations had to be unconditional if State money was to be made available.

Floods on Ebb In Frederick, Roads Reopen

Frederick, Md., Sept. 1.—Swirling floodwaters sent out of narrow streams by Saturday's torrential rain receded under a bright sun today and practically all roads in Western Maryland, section hardest hit, were opened last night.

But Frederick County was still mopping up and counting the damage of what residents termed the worst flood since the Johnstown flood of 1889.

Two thousand feet of Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks were washed out near Point of Rocks, tying up some of the line's crack trains. The west bound line still was out late yesterday, but the east line was in service.

Damage to stock at one store on South Court street in Frederick was estimated unofficially at $20,000.

Damage by Bombs Small, British Say

Homes Hardest Hit; Factory Production Reported Maintained

By Robert P. Post.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 1.—After a month of heavy German raiding, it is perhaps, useful to try to analyze the actual effect the raids have had in this country.

To one government office almost hourly come detailed reports of what the Germans have done. Several thousand factories, power stations, bridges and other key points of the British industrial system are listed and mapped. After a raid, this office is able to make up within a few hours a report of the damage done.

These reports, of course, are kept secret. Clearly, it would be folly to tell the enemy exactly where he has hit, and where he has missed. Therefore no details can be published, no names, no locations.

Damage Is Small

A careful study shows the smallness of the damage done. The reports are not propaganda in any sense unless the heads of the British defense are deliberately propagandizing themselves. When reports on certain areas known to have been bombed are requested they are immediately produced. The whole picture is laid out with no limitation except the rule of confidence.

The picture they paint shows astonishing little damage by the widespread raids—at least considering the type and scale of those the Germans have been making recently.

Production Keeps Up

Not that there has not been damage and deaths. Some bombers always get through. But the industrial production of Britain has not been really affected. Damage to housing and property is of the sort that it requires search to find it. Transportation and power, while in some cases interrupted, in no case have been knocked out. Airports have been damaged but planes still take off and return.

One or two factories have been hit and damaged. In most cases the damages have been repaired within a matter or hours. Sometimes production has been hampered for as much as a week but it has never been stopped and no factory of the key list has been destroyed. This list is already several thousand in length and is mounting by a large number daily, as more and more plants come into production.

Railway lines of course have been interrupted. The same thing is true of power lines. But at no vital point, no important freight yard, no power station, has been touched. Damage to transportation and power has been easily reparable in a short time.

The greatest amount of damage has been done in residential areas. Here there has undoubtedly been some hardship. The British have three catagories for listing the havoc caused by bombs.

First, there is the damaged. In this list are included all houses affected, even if only to the extent of a pane of glacss or a couple of tiles off the roof.

Secondly, there is the uninhabitable, which means it will be some time before plaster and glass can be replaced and the house made livable again.

Finally, there is the destroyed, which means that either a bomb has wrecked the house or has so weakened it as to make demolition necessary. By far the greatest number of houses are in the first two catagories, and of these, the first are more numerous.

It has been a tough war so far as glass is concerned.

Morale both of the population as a whole and of the important factory workers is standing up excellently. Thumbing through reports, the words "morale excellent" recur.

There are one or two cases of workers threatening to strike because the sirens did not sound until after the bombs had dropped. That, however, has been fixed up in almost every case now by an agreement whereby the workers will go on after the siren sounds, while watchers sit on the roof ready to sound a second internal danger alarm when planes approach closely.

Another thing which pleases the British authorities is the effectiveness of their preparations.

Shelters Stand Up

The A. R. P. services and the fire services, apparently, are meeting the menace most efficiently. Anderson shelters (steel doghouses, issued free to all the poorer people) stood up with bombs all around them.

Of course, all this may have to be revised in the light of future tactics or material which the Germans may bring against these islands. But it can be said with assurance that unless the blitzkrieg becames far worse than it has been to date, Hitler can never break this country from the air.

Nazi Bombs Ruin Thousand Homes

Ramsgate, England, Sept. 1 (AP).—Nearly 1,000 workers' homes and seaside boarding houses were wrecked in the Nazi air raid on Ramsgate near the Thames Estuary on August 24, it was disclosed today.

The Germans dropped about 500 bombs on the town, but casualties were reported few.

Communal centers aref eeding the homeless, but the biggest problem for those in new homes is to get furniture.

British Fliers Raid Bases in Libya

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 1 (AP).—The most extensive raids on Italian strongholds in Libya since the start of the war were reported today in a Royal Air Force communique.

It was pointed out here that Eastern Libya airdromes attacked naturally would be important bases for any Italian offensive against Egypt.

The R. A. F. said heavy damage was inflicted, including at least six Italian warplanes destroyed. (There was no mention of the Italian-reported raid on Sicily).

Rickenbacker to Speak At Richmond Banquet

Richmond, Sept. 1 (AP).—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace president of Eastern Air Lines, will speak at the annual banquet of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks here, September 19.

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; Gov. Price and Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, editor of the Richmond News Leader, will be among other speakers. Rickenbacker's subject will be "Aviation in War and Peace." The convention will open Tuesday evening, September 17, and continue to September 20.

Richmond Motorist Killed in Accident

Richmond, Sept. 1 (AP).—William Herbert Hood, 21, of Richmond, was killed instantly Saturday afternoon when his automobile overturned on the Petersburg pike, about 10 miles south of Richmond.

Hood's car went out of control and rolled over into the path of another vehicle, driven by Freeman Spencer, of Richmond.

Communists Riot In Yugoslavia

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, Sept. 1 (AP).—Several persons were injured and scores arrested today when police clashed with Communists demonstrating against the government of Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic.

The Communists distributed pamphlets branding the government a fifth column for Germany and Italy an ddemanding a military pact with Russia.

Bucharest Police Arrest U. S. Woman

Bucharest, Sept. 1 (AP).—Among numerous other persons arrested during Bucharest disturbances today was Mrs. Robert St. John, wife of the Associated Press correspondent. She was taken into custody as she drove past the Italian and German legations in a taxi. Mrs. St. John said she was manhandled and injured and held incommunicado until finally released.

However, the wave of popular feeling was reported throughout Rumania, with greatest outbreaks here, at Brasov and at Cluj and at Sibiu, center of a German minority.

Disorders Spread

As the night wore on, the streets of Bucharest reechoed to the constant pound of hobnailed boots as more and more gendarmes and soldiers were pressed into service.

The disorders began Sunday and spread throughout the day and night.

Scores of persons were injured and widespread damage was inflicted on property, chiefly that belonging to Hungarians, as indignation mounted.

Priests, army officers, government officials, students and rugged mountaineers rubbed shoulders in the milling throngs. The commander of one Rumanian army division announced his men would die to the last man rather than abandon their present frontier, and peasants armed with pitchforks, knives and shotguns were reported taking up positions in trenches vacated by some frontier forces.

[Widespread disorders moved the Hungarian government to prepare 80,000 men for a sudden march into the newly acquired territory if needed.

[The disorders disrupted Axis plans for a quick return of both Hungary and Rumania to normal conditions. The production of needed supplies has been at a standstill for two months because of troop mobilizations.

[After the Vienna conference both Hungary and Rumania announced plans for gradual demobilization. Today informed quarters believed these plans would have to be postponed unless quiet is restored.]

In Bucharest itself simultaneous protest meetings began amid scenes of great disorder at the statues of Rumanian patriots opposite Bucharest University.

The crowds of men and women were joined by armed police squads in singing national anthems and shouting, "Not an inch for the Magyars."

For almost an hour the crowds swarmed through Bucharest streets and finally started a dash toward King Carol's palace. Every street leading to the palace was packed with massed soldiers who charged into them and forced a retreat.

The screaming crowds, including priests, army officers and government officials, then went to the apartment of Juliu Maniu, Transylvanian peasant leader, where one of his aides delivered a fiery resistance speech.

"We want to fight the Hungarians," the crowd shouted.

At Brasov, which has a large German population, tens of thousands of demonstrators cheered for Maniu and Crown Prince Mihai after speakers had denounced the persons "who sold out Transylvania."

Press Denounces Cession

The Bucharest press, which is under strict government control, was unanimous in denouncing the German decision of Vienna.

Currentul, one of the most strongly pro-German papers, declared:

"The policy that Germany followed from 1918 to 1940 was inspired by the Versailles Treaty. We have now suffered at her hands the same indignities and humiliations she received at Versailles.

"Clemenceau told her, 'Sign here; there is nothing for you to discuss.' We were told the same thing at Vienna."

At Craiova, seat of the Rumanian-Bulgarian conference, the Bulgarians were demanding that they be given the Southern Dobruja at the same time Hungary gets Transylvania, but the Rumanians were opposing this.

Resistance Formed

While all of this was going on a mixed Hungarian and Rumanian commission met at the frontier city of Oradia to arrange removal of the Rumanian population as directed by the decision handed down by the Axis powers.

In Cluj, a "committee of resistance" was formed to begin a fight for the return of the territory even before its cession to Hungary has been completed.

Trains leaving northern Transylvania were so jammed that passengers had to leave and enter through windows. All were running hours behind schedule.

Automobiles Commandeered

The cars were filled not only with fleeing Transylvanians but with ducks, chickens and other possessions the emigres were trying to take to their new homes somewhere in the old kingdom of Rumania.

New Europe Already Here, Nazis Believe

People Convinced Reich Will Triumph As War Passes Year

By Percival Knauth.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Sept. 1.—As the first day of the second year of the war dawned this morning Germany looked backward on a "year of revolutionary history" and ahead to the future, still undefined, but assured in the minds of the people.

The arbitration of Vienna, as German political commentators see it, has already given an outline of the contours of the "new Europe" of which Chancellor Hitler spoke last October after the conclusion of the Polish campaign.

[Bucharest dispatches meanwhile told of violent demonstrations by the Rumanian people against the Axis "diktat" of Vienna, which gave northern Transylvania to Hungary.]

The one enemy that remains is being pounded daily under a hail of German bombs, but, as one newspaper puts it, is "holding out with a tenacity which forces from us an admiration we may grant this foe."

Gratitude to Fuehrer

The historic contemplation of the press is filled with a deep note of gratitude to the Fuehrer, "whose unexampled victories are visible to all eyes." Prophecies for the future are filled with an unshakable conviction of victory, allowing, however, for the possibility that England's faith in her ideals may yet stand some pounding.

In the view of the newspaper, Frankfurter Zeitung, "England, too, will awaken. The question of responsibility and blame will arise in England, too, on the day of catastrophe. At this moment most Englishmen surely still believe in the good of their cause. Those who have some doubts naturally feel obliged, as decent people, to stand by their flag in the hour of greatest danger.

"It is this which makes the fight so hard and will continue to make it hard until England's definite defeat.

Tenacity Not Enough

"It is Germany's task not only to beat the British foreign minister, the general staff, the admiralty and other administrations of the various departments, but also, above all, those Britons (and they number many) whose tenacity of will and desperate courage, force from us despite our criticisms of the morals and policies of their leading classes, an admiration which is strong and we may grant this foe.

"But even the most tenacious of men are not proof against catastrophe. Catastrophies often develop slowly, slowly at first, and invisibly, but the word, itself, implies a sudden, violent collapse.

"There is no one in Germany or Italy, indeed, one might almost say in the whole world, who doubts that England is headed for catastrophe—and more quickly than optimists are inclined to think."

Hour Near, Says Goebbels

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 1.—The "decisive hour is inexorably near" for Britain, German Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels declared today.

Speaking at Katowice, in German-occupied Poland on the first anniversary of the German-Polish conflict, the minister told Silesians that "developments of the past year must have convinced even Englishmen that the Fuehrer acts when the right hour arrives.

"Recently many Britons left the impression that they are impatient for a showdown. These impatient gentlemen will not want for an answer from the German armed forces.

"The Fuhrer sets a decisive hour and that means he can depend on his people."

15,000-Ton Ship Sunk

The German high command meanwhile claimed new blows in the war against Britain—destruction of 133 British planes yesterday, 100,000 tons of shipping by a submarine on a three-day prowl, as well as damage to British airfields in Kent and Sussex counties and dock facilities at the mouth of the Thames yesterday and last night.

Among the vessels listed as sunk by the U-boat was the 15,000-ton "modern British auxiliary cruiser" Dunvegan Castle.

(The British admiralty acknowledged the loss of this ship last night. The admiralty said the Dunvegan Castle was torpedoed in the Atlantic and 30 in the crew were reported missing.)

The high command's communique said "air and armaments factories in middle England all were bombed" Saturday and during the night and that numerous fires were seen by Nazi pilots.

It listed British losses as follows: One hundred and sixteen planes in air fights, 14 on the ground and 3 by antiaircraft fire, and 74 barrage balloons. Thirty-two German planes are missing, the high command said.

word to conjure with in England. The secret fighter of which so much had been whispered, has lost much of its luster today. The great fleets of bombers with the threat of which Hitler terrorized Europe for years, were expected a year ago to swoop on London immediately and led many to suppose that the empire's capital would be a smoking shambles.

Three Waves Driven Back

Today three waves of bombers which tried to thrust on London were hurled back. Scattered units of the first wave penetrated as far as Croydon. All but isolated individuals of the second wave were turned back by fighters and anti-aircraft fire, at the coast. None of the third wave reached the capital.

Saturday night, however, London suffered one of the most costly raids in human life since the war began, when a German bomber caught in a ring of searchlights and fighters, in a frantic effort to escape dumped his load of high explosives over a crowded working class district of East London.

Windows were shattered over half a square mile. Poor houses and little one-man stores were blown to pieces. The streets in the district were littered with wreckage.

One hospital alone reported 150 injured. No figure for total casualties is available. The bodies of a boy and girl were blown on to a roof of a church adjacent to their home. A mother and daughter were killed when a bomb fell in the back garden of their home.

Bus Trolleys Broken

Trolley bus wires were broken down in one street, but were mended in time for the resumption of traffic this morning.

At a late hour tonight the day's bag of Nazi planes was reported by the air ministry as 25. Fifteen R. A. F. planes "came down," but the pilots of nine are safe. Final figures for yesterday's action put the German losses at 85 and British losses at 37, with the pilots of 27 of these safe.

The most notable thing about these figures is the sharp decrease in the ratio of German to British losses. In yesterday's fighting it is less than 2 to 1, whereas in earlier battles it was 3, 4 or even 5 to 1.

This points to an improvement in German technique, as the invaders try new formations and tactics to oppose to the R. A. F. defense. Chief change made by the Germans appears to have been to increase their fighter protection. On the other hand the antiaircraft gunners' bag is becoming steadily more impressive as shown by yesterday's score of 15. This was at first quite the weakest part of the British defensive scheme.

Three Attacks on Southeast

Although only two segments of raiding formations got through to the London area today the southeastern counties received three attacks, each composed of from 100 to 150 raiders.

Four Nazi bombers dived low and dropped their bombs on a densely populated part of one southeastern town.

More than 50 high explosive bombs were dropped in and around a northeastern town last night by wave after wave of heavy bombers in one of the worst attacks this area has yet suffered.

One heavy bomb dropped in a crowded area near the center of the town. Another opened a huge crater in the street, damaging a gas main and neighboring stores.

Fires Under Control

A number of men were killed later in the day in a nearby village when a delayed action bomb exploded.

Many fires were started in a northwestern town, two of them still burning this morning, although "under control," following last night's bombing. The roof of the town hall was damaged and other buildings were hit. The number of casualties were described as "small having regard for the scale of the attack."

There was another widespread raid on the Midlands last night, causing damage to property. There were said to have been very few people hurt.

Italians Take British Town In Kenya Drive

Occupation of Buna Strengthens Hold On African Dolo Salient

By Camille Cianferra.
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Sept. 1.—The Italian forces have resumed their offensive in East Africa by taking Buna, a village 60 miles south of Moyale, Kenya Colony, and an important caravan center, according to today's war communique.

This is the first advance made since the occupation of British Somaliland, and is expected to mark the beginning of other operations aimed at attaining control of Kenya.

Buna, it is pointed out, enables Italy to strengthen her occupation of the Dolo salient, and is also a valuable strategic objective because it is on the road to Wajir in Kenya and Chisimaio, a port in southern Italian Somaliland.

With seizure of Buna, it is explained, the Italian troops are now in a position to carry an offensive against the strongly fortified British outpost of Wajir, both from Italian Somaliland and Ethiopia. Wajir, which has been subjected to steady bombing in the past weeks, is expected to be the next objective of the present operations in that sector.

Objective Is Nairobi

The ultimate objecitve, of course, Nairobi, the capital of Kenya, but no large scale offensive can be undertaken against that town as long as Wajir is held by the British. Should Wajir fall, then, it is stressed, the Italians would have command of all the roads which lead into the interior from Eastern Kenya.

The Cagliaris airport in Sicily was raided by British planes and military headquarters were damaged, as well as two grounded airplanes, today's communique says.

In the Eastern Mediterranean, an enemy convoy was sighted and bombed by Italian airplanes. A merchantman, says the communique, was hit and seriously damaged.

[Authoritative London quarters, the Associated Press reported, said this claim was "a direct exposure of their recent trumpetings that Britain is unable to use the Mediterreanean and Suez Canal."]

The Urban League

The Urban League of Washington, which has been in operation since the spring of 1939, is a branch of an interracial organization founded in New York City 30 years ago for the purpose of integrating Negro workers into the normal economic life of our cities. The organization is primarily concerned with long-range adjustment problems. Yet the urgency and importance of its task are emphasized by the hardships of the oppressed and underprivileged of other lands.

The local Urban League refers to the colored residents of the Capital City as "Washington's permanent refugees." That is a harsh but revealing phrase. It calls attention to the fact that thousands of colored residents are ill-adjusted or entirely unadjusted to the social and economic life of this community.

The local league, which was founded by Canon Anson Phelps Stokes and Mr. Elwood Street, former director of public welfare, seeks the support of both white and colored residents in bringing about a better community understanding of this underprivileged group.

Although the league has been handicapped by limited funds, its first annual report indicates that it has already acquired a great deal of useful information, with a view to increasing and diversifying employment opportunities for Negroes. Contacts have been made with the Alley Dwelling Authority in the hope of providing better and cheaper quarters for Negro families.

The league's representatives have likewise interested themselves in local trade-union activities as they affect skilled Negro workers in the unorganized section of the building trades. Discriminatory union policies are added to the other handicaps of the colored job seeker. Because of limited employment opportunities and congested housing conditions, the league is actively discouraging the inflow of Negroes into the city.

The Urban League wisely stresses the importance of interracial cooperation in studying and furthering plans to improve the economic lot of Negroes. The task is obviously a community responsibility, and just as plainly an undertaking mutually advantageous to white and colored residents. For an economically underprivileged Negro population puts a heavy strain upon the resources of the city. The more fortunate have to support the relief agencies and the correctional institutions made necessary by poverty and its accompaniment—crime.

The preponderant percentage of relief funds devoted to Negro relief and the high percentage of Negro convictions for crimes and misdemeanors is the direct outcome of economic handicaps with which Negro workers have to contend.

A Lesson Learned

As men reckon time, it is only a year and a day since Hitler's mechanized legions swooped down on Poland and began a war whose end no man can yet foresee and whose evil consequences will be felt by generations yet to be born. It seems more like an eternity. For in these 12 months the face of Europe has been altered almost beyond recognition.

Thus far the Third Reich has been unfailingly victorious to the point where today Hitler is the unquestioned master of the continent. His will is law all the way from the Arctic to the Mediterranean; from the English Channel to the fluid frontiers of Russia. At his command old and historic nations have disappeared, their peoples reduced to the status of slaves or serfs.

Yet at the end of a year of tremendous triumphs he does not stand unchallenged.

Britain fights on. And as long as she does there is hope that the lamps of freedom which he has so brutally put out in the Old World will be rekindled.

But the peoples who live on this side of the Atlantic cannot afford to be over-optimistic regarding the outcome of the titanic struggle taking place in the air over the British Isles. What happened to Poland, Denmark, Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium and France provides the free nations of this hemisphere with a lesson they can ill afford to ignore. While there is still time we must gird our loins and prepare for any eventuality.

Fortunately, signs are multiplying that this need is being recognized. A year ago large numbers of Americans were complacent about the grim developments taking place abroad. They could not imagine that as a consequence of them this Nation and this hemisphere would be placed in dire peril. But that complacency has disappeared. The realities that face us are unmistakable and the American people, fiercely proud of their liberties and their independence, are determined that these shall not be lost by default.

Labor's Day

Labor Day in the United States is given over to celebrations in which all classes participate. It is a real holiday—not at all like the first of May class demonstrations of a vanished Europe, which so often ended in riots and bloodshed. The difference is easily explained. Europeans have always been class conscious, even when they lived under democratic rule. Americans, on the other hand, have little class consciousness. Most of them are workers. The few who can live without labor have either earned the right to retire or else belong to a very small privileged minority whose prestige is not heightened by inactivity.

Labor Day is a fitting occasion on which to reflect upon the great advantages of a society in which the worker is regarded as an individual unit of the entire population, not simply as a member of a trade union or a labor party committed to programs that may not be in the interest of the Nation as a whole. It is, of course, only natural that organized labor groups should make the holiday an occasion for reflecting upon past progress and future plans for the improvement of the bargaining position of wage earners. And it is also to be expected that labor organizations will be reminded of their responsibilities toward the communities of which they are a part.

This year those reminders have especial significance. For the country is entering upon a preparedness campaign that will demand sacrifices of everybody—possibly temporary relinquishment of some of the gains secured for labor in recent years both by direct bargaining and under protective laws. However, the National Defense Advisory Commission has just issued a statement of policy designed to set at rest any fears that the emergency will be made an excuse for exploiting workers.

"Every attempt should be made," the commission says, "to conserve in every way possible all of our achievements in the way of social betterment. But the pressing argument for maintaining industrial safeguards in the present emergency is that they actually contribute to efficiency."

This is more than a reassuring message. It is also a challenge to workers, organized and unorganized, to show that liberal treatment of labor need not subtract from the wealth of the community but may actually increase it. The attitude of labor will largely determine whether the commission's optimism is justified.

Lovettsville Tragedy

The wreck at Lovettsville, Va., of a Pennsylvania Central Airlines transport plane, with 25 killed, including Senator Lundeen, of Minnesota, brings to a terribly tragic end the longest casualty-free period in the history of American commercial aviation.

From March 27, 1939, until this wreck occurred last Saturday, American airlines could boast of a superb record of safety. During those 17 months airlines carried 3,100,000 passengers and flew 1,300,000,000 passenger miles without a single fatality. This was a token of the great mechanical progress which has been achieved in the field of aviation as well as a tribute to the care and foresight taken by company officials, plane personnel and Government agencies to insure a minimum of risk and a maximum of safety in air transport.

Because of this very record of care and safety, however, the Lovettsville wreck deserves the most thoroughgoing investigation. It was not only the first fatal crash on any line in 17 months; it was the first fatal accident to any plane of the Pennsylvania Central Airlines. That company's planes had made no fewer than 71,200 flights between Pittsburgh and Washington without a single fatality before Saturday's crash. And Capt. Scroggins, pilot of the ill-fated craft, had 21 years of flying experience to his credit and had flown more than 1,000,000 miles.

Are We Americanized?

Somewhat belatedly we have received a copy of Senator Arthur Capper's recent address in the Senate on "Americanization of the People of the District of Columbia." At the time this address was delivered and upon rereading it in its present form we recognized it as a cogent appeal for political justice for this disfranchised community. Senator Capper is one of the best friends the District has in the Senate.

Yet we cannot refrain from pointing out that it is not the people of the District who are in need of Americanization, but rather the arbitrary and undemocratic system by which they are governed. Had Senator Capper thought twice, he would not have asked Congress to "Americanize the people of the District." Washington has drawn its inhabitants from all parts of the Nation. To a remarkable degree they are intelligent, patriotic and fully capable of participating in the governmental processes by which the destiny of the United States is controlled.

The point is worth raising because too many legislators on Capitol Hill, not including Senator Capper, are inclined to regard Washingtonians as a group of stuffy bureaucrats or temporary residents whose interests lie elsewhere. That attitude sometimes serves as an excuse for failure to grant residents of the District the basic rights exercised by other Americans.

There is no need to democratize residents of the District. But there is an urgent need for recognition of the fact that they are normal American citizens entitled to a voice in national affairs and a reasonable degree of control over their own local government.

Railroad Gains

During the first seven months of the current year Class 1 railroads report an increase of 39 per cent in net operating income compared with the corresponding period a year ago. The gains reflect an expansion of gross earnings accompanied by a decline in operating ratios—that is, in the ratio of expenses to earnings.

This improved showing is due to a number of causes. Domestic business activity, for instance, has been greater this year than during the first half of 1939, especially in iron and steel and other industrial lines that provide large amounts of revenue freight for the carriers. The European war has also been the cause of an extremely heavy volume of export freight, while increased buying by Latin America has likewise added to the outward-bound freight movement. All these developments have brought business to the railroads.

It should be noted that the increase in traffic is not attributable to the defense program which is still in the preparatory stages. When that program is in full swing, it will further stimulate activity in the heavy goods industries and add appreciably to the volume of rail traffic.

Another factor favorable to the roads is that few of them will be called upon to pay excess profits taxes to the Government, because their returns in recent years have been so abnormally low.

Bankrupt roads have also made great progress in scaling their indebtedness. The ICC reports a reduction of over $2,000,000,000 in the debt of roads undergoing reorganization with a reduction of over $90,000,000 in yearly fixed charges.

Passage of the Wheeler-Lea transportation bill, believed to be assured within a few days, would bring water transport agencies under ICC regulation and strengthen the competitive position of the roads. Although objections are raised to some features of the bill it is generally supported by the railroad interests.

For diverse reasons, therefore, the outlook for the roads is distinctly promising, especially by comparison with the immediate past. It serves no purpose to look backward to the more prosperous years of the twenties since the conditions prevailing then are past recall. To indulge in such invidious comparisons would only be an invitation to futile repining.

New Yorkese

We are very sorry to learn that Dr. Elias Lieberman, the new associate superintendent of New York's public schools, insists that children of the five boroughs shall be trained to express themselves in "cultured American language." This can mean only that within a generation or two their quaint and charming New York dialect will become extinct.

Up to now the singular thing about New Yorkese has been its hardihood. It has stubbornly resisted such standardizing influences as the movies and the radio. It persists even in an age when the Gullah folk are learning to copy the high-toned accents of Mr. Milton Cross or Mr. H. V. Kaltenborn, when the Pennsylvania Dutch manage their verbs almost as smoothly as Miss Olivia de Havilland manages hers. Indeed, the New York dialect has been more than holding its own against the speech that Mr. H. L. Mencken has classified as "international English."

One reason for this is the fact that the dialect is very easy for foreigners to learn. It has fewer vowels, fewer consonants and a smaller vocabulary than any other known language, except Choctaw, Middle Scythian, and possibly Pictish.

It is not true, however, that New Yorkers resolve all vowels into "oi" or that they are congenitally incapable of pronouncing "er." They merely invert these sounds, just as the French, Germans and Danes invert the English pronunciation of "v" and "w." For example, a garage mechanic might thus address his helper: "Oil, gimme de erl." Or a scullion might exclaim to the cook: "Hey, Hoibet, cha noda butta's sperled?"

It is a pity that New Yorkese, like Gaelic and the now extinct Cornish tongue, possesses virtually no written literature. There are only a few simple and rather senseless rhymes such as:

My goil is Goity Graty, she soit'ny is a boid;
She liz on doity-secun' street, no fer fim doity-doid.
She rees de Evenink Join'l; she rees de Nuh Yawk Woild,
I soit'ny do love Goity, when Goity's harris coiled!

Nor have many of the great English masterpieces of prose and verse been translated into New Yorkese, though such a work would offer many interesting possibilities.

Favors Debate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is the favorite argument of New Dealers, in order to hang on desperately to their jobs and power, to say that Mr. Roosevelt is indispensable in the face of the existing emergency. Obviously the emergency is of Mr. Roosevelt's own making. During the past seven years he has been so absorbed with crack-pot reforms, calculated mainly to attract votes by arousing class hatred, that he lost sight of the necessity for developing an adequate defense against modern methods of warfare. He has wasted billions which could have been wisely spent so as to have rendered us safe from foreign invasion.

He has permitted our national defenses to become obsolete and hence open to attack under modern methods. He has undermined our national unity with a so-called "leadership" which has scattered us out along divergent and antagonistic paths instead of toward a powerful Union.

With the best available means at his disposal of knowing what has been going on, he has calmly watched the dissolution of our unity in the face of the steady development of modern methods of warfare and has done little or nothing to meet the threat of invasion until now that it is time for him to run for office again. Naturally, under the circumstances, he must shrink at Mr. Willkie's challenge to debate the issues of the campaign he pretends to have been drafted for.

If Mr. Roosevelt is really indispensable, let him personally face Mr. Willkie in such a debate, where he will have no one but himself to fall back on for "all the answers." Nothing could be more appropriate. It is these two who have been honored by the nomination of the two greatest political parties in the land. They are opposed in seeking the greatest office this country has to offer and it is Mr. Roosevelt who admits naively to being indispensable. Let him therefore personally prove his indispensability, if he can, in open debate, or let him withdraw in favor of his ghost writer.

The old adage of "not enanging horses in the middle of the stream" belongs to the "horse and buggy days." It is as obsolete today as our national defenses have become under Mr. Roosevelt's neglect. Let us cut loose from the old-fashioned horse with which we are now bogged down and climb aboard the modern businesslike craft that will carry us back to safety and prosperity with the efficient streamlined administration offered by the successful businesslike Mr. Willkie. England changed Chamberlain "in the middle of the stream." Let us change before it is too late.

Louder Than Words

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Inasmuch as language is used for the sole purpose of conveying thought, it seems little short of ridiculous for news commentators to dwell at such length upon Wendell Willkie's pronunciation of the word sacrifice. While it generally seems desirable to speak correctly, no one is a hundred per cent accurate in the use of English.

Everybody knew what Willkie meant when he said "sacrifice," which is the main thing. After all, the great majority of American people are more interested in ideas than in vocal charm. And "actions" continue to "speak louder than words." E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

Cool Heads vs. Cold Feet

Inspiration From Lincoln

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The other evening I stood on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial watching the reflection of a copper-colored moon in the reflection pool and looking into the faces of an endless stream of men, women and children trudging up to gaze at the immortal Lincoln.

Surely every conceivable nationality in this great Nation seemed to have been there and in every case the reaction was seemingly the same. They ascended chattering and laughing, but as they descended there was an awed expression on every face and a reverent kind of quietness.

I got the feeling that out of the eyes of this sad-faced statue had come something that was akin to the spirit of worship that is indescribable in its effect on all peoples. And as I looked at this common expression, I thought of what a fine thing it would be in these turbulent times if it were possible for thousands and thousands of men, women and children throughout the Nation to stand before this imposing figure and drink in some of the words of wisdom inscribed there.

Who knows but that in this hour of world crisis it would dispel some of our petty personal conceits and make us genuinely aware of the colossal task that lies before us, if we are to preserve the remaining semblance of democracy and civilization. In the final analysis, though our guns be superb, we will never be able to beat all swords into pruning hooks unless our faith in justice and right for all mankind is unconquerable.

Tri-Party Debate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Norman Thomas, Socialist banner carrier, is right in there, swinging with the best of them. Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate, in his acceptance speech, challenged President Roosevelt to public debate. A few days later, Norman Thomas telegraphed Mr. Willkie: "In principle your position and the President's on vital issues is the same. My position on peacetime conscription and economic policy is very different and emphatically worth public discussion."

Nothing was heard from Mr. Willkie for a while. It took a picket line of pretty girls from the Young People's Socialist League to draw from the Republican candidate: "If Norman Thomas can get the President to consent, we'll make a tri-party debate of it."

Thomas has already licked Willkie in debate some years ago on the utilities question. Roosevelt will be just as easy for him on any issue. All that is necessary is Mr. Roosevelt's "yes" to set the stage for Norman Thomas to out-debate the "political twins of 1940."

Fingerprinting

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This fingerprinting of respectable, innocent people is not justified. Why not just fingerprint the American gangsters and those who are caught in committing crimes? Fingerprinting is not infallible. There must be in the world two or more persons with the same identical fingerprints. It is apt to get some innocent person in a lot of trouble someday.

More On Parking

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of August 24 a gentleman signing himself as "Another Observer" comments on my letter of July 15, regarding the matter of municipal downtown parking garages. I should like to pursue the matter a little further, as I do not appear to have made myself clear to "Another Observer" and hence conclude that it may not be clear to others.

I seem to have failed to make "Another Observer" understand the difference between my interpretation of parking and storage, which I conceive to be the difference between leaving the car for a few minutes and leaving the car for an hour or more.

I believe our parking problem, as defined above, is easily susceptible of improvement by the installation of more parking meters. It is the storage problem that causes the headache.

"Another Observer" ignores the fact that the construction of storage facilities through the use of general tax funds involves payment by the general public for the exclusive benefit of motorists, and that angle must be justified (or swallowed).

Also, "Another Observer" questions that the motoring public will ever be willing to pay the cost of off-street facilities provided by private enterprise. I disagree with him. I think that the public will soon come to the point where they will be willing to pay these costs, provided the storage of cars on the downtown streets is eliminated by enforcement through the use of parking meters, and when the authorities and others cease to hold out rosy dreams of off-street storage facilities to be paid for in part by somebody else.

I quite agree that the parking and storage problem affects the entire economic structure of the city, and therefore feel that it should be handled in a realistic way and that the motoring public should not be kidded along by illusions of cheap off-street storage to be paid for by the general public through withdrawal of valuable properties from the tax rolls and use of general tax funds. America

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In these days of unrest and turmoil we see nation after nation drawn into war which, like a raging forest fire, sends its crimson glow over the quiet and peaceful horizon of this hemisphere. Our hearts frighten at the sight of war's ugly face, as we are fearful of our heritage of freedom which some men envy.

As all Americans are free to do, we may disagree in matters of faith and hope, but in matters pertaining to the security of this noble land our hearts beat as one. For every true American's concern is America, and his love for her flows freely in the warmth of his bloodstream. Our deep-spirited love for America plays sweetly upon our heartstrings these days and we obtain a magnificent outlet when we sing that grand old prayer and poem, "God Bless America."

I would that all of us from some lofty height might look "from the mountain, from the prairie, to the ocean white with foam," and appreciate the beautiful soul of our land—a land as noble, as beautiful as Nature's God.

At Every Man's Door

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is positively no room on this earth now for an isolationist. His name is Ichabod. He is obsolete. If he insists on his isolationism, let him go into a hole and stay there, but let him remember that he cannot take his country with him.

The world now is at every man's door, and the sooner one realizes it and assumes his responsibility as a world citizen, the better for him and all others. "No one liveth to himself and no one dieth to himself."

If the world could put into practice the principle of the brotherhood of man, every sword could be sheathed today, but man's inborn selfishness keeps him fighting, and so war is inevitable.

The Post Impressionist

Tres Belles Lettres

LATELY someone jeered at the fact that businessmen are accustomed to refer to the pamphlets, folders, circulars, brochures and other advertising that they constantly distribute as "Literature."

At first blush I was inclined to jeer with him, but second thought impelled me to stifle the jeer and, instead, to argue against him.

For what, after all, is literature? Is it not written language that has definite form and exerts an emotional appeal?

"The average man," I therefore told this critic, "has always sought in literature the divine gift that he can now find in modern advertising. For there he experiences a transformation of routine existence and an apotheosis of his personality. And this is accomplished through an art form that has an appeal to loosen the very purse strings!"

My acquaintance smiled winningly, with filmless teeth well exposed, astounded me by uttering a sentence in French, walked half a mile to the left and back again, extracted a cigarette from an imitation revolver, coughed, plugged the cigarette into his mouth, pointed his finger at me, stated "That satisfies," and gave the Go-Go sign to my discourse.

I once more put my shoulder to the wheel: "Advertising that streams continually into the homes of thousands upon thousands in this great country leaves its readers no doubt of their majestic destinies.

"No matter how unimportant a man may be normally, he is kowtowed to by powerful corporations, and flattered in a style that was used of old only toward reigning monarchs and their favorites.

"With wastebasket conveniently to hand, or contemptuous comments hovering on the end of his tongue, this ordinary man considers the work of highly paid brains and dismisses it or gives it his attention with the aloof unconcern of a god or a dictator. And couriers are sent out by advertising agents to ascertain his 'reactions.'"

My companion held up a hand in remonstrance, flicked away his cigarette, produced a joy pipe and filled it from a tidy red tin, ran a comb through his glossy hair, and settled back comfortably in an overstuffed armchair. I then understood that I was to continue. Also that I was giving him full satisfaction for his money, and that I need not return any of it. (In fact, he had given me none.)

"From the pages of advertising that meet his eye," I recommended, "the average man sucks the conviction that he is king of the earth. He finds that he is one of those beings, moreover, who is 'always right.' He is told in plain words and fancy pictures that he is the person of taste and discrimination for whom inventors have labored to create a lavender-scented shaving soap, or for whom artists have connived to build an automobile body with lines more enticing than those of the Venus de Milo.

"Dishes of which Nero and Heliogabalus never heard are offered to him in cans and cartons. Raiment rare still is urged upon him, so that he may clothe himself in glass, silk, wood, paper or even bread crumbs, in a way to astound the ancient Merlin.

"He finds himself wooed ardently, though humbly, by corporations worth millions, who ask the privilege of sending him garters or encyclopedias, and who warn him not to send them any money, so that no taint of commercialism shall be injected into at least the initial transaction.

"Through expensively worded and illustrated appeals, sometimes rendered to the accompaniment of musicians and the quips of court jesters through the very ether, there rises into his consciousness the vision of a superman—and that man is himself! And as for the average woman, what words can exaggerate the visions and the appeals that are created for her by this same literature?

"Through the adulations, seductions, allurements and laudations, and by means of the lyrics, odes, apostrophes, epics, essays and sonnets of the businessman's literature, what transformations are not wrought in the egos of filing clerks, stenographers, junior and senior typists, busboys, forest rangers, housekeepers, bookkeepers, beekeepers—in fact, in the lives of all those who can read, in a country that rapidly is banishing illiteracy!

"In reading or hearing the artful creations of the advertising man," I concluded, "these persons step out of the chrysalis of their everyday selves and parade before themselves in all the glory of their brightest dreams! And what literature, even that of the greatest masters of the past, ever has accomplished more?"

I turned upon my acquaintance with a flashing look of triumph, which I immediately changed to one of concern, accompanied by a hearty blow on the back, as I found that he was giving me only part of his attention. The rest was devoted to an effort to procure a light from his mechanical cigar lighter—which was cunningly contrived in the shape of a lady's slipper.

"If what I have been describing to you is not literature," I said, "if it is not genuine, great and eternal literature—then it is nothing!"

My friend's eyes twinkled and he grinned with harmonious assent. "I completely agree with that," he murmured.

As he walked away his shoulders shook with contrition. I am almost sure that it was contrition.

Canada Is Pleased

By Our Ottawa Correspondent

The Ogdensburg Accord Is Hailed

Ottawa, Aug. 29.

THE AGREEMENT reached by the governments of the United States and Canada to establish a permanent defense board had a very favorable reception in Canada. The move was warmly commended by every paper of importance, regardless of party affiliations: even the Montreal Gazette, which has been for years a stanch exponent of Tory imperialism and has always viewed the United States and its policies with suspicion, declared that the pact would be applauded on both sides of the international boundary and would bring comfort to the British Commonwealth.

Notes of criticism have been few. In some quarters, however, misgivings are expressed about the effects of the pact in persuading a substantial body of American opinion that the United States is giving very valuable help in undertaking to protect the largest British overseas dominion and thereby inducing it to relax its pressure for more immediate practical help to Britain. However, Mr. Hanson K. C., the leader of the Conservative opposition who was consulted beforehand, has given his blessing to the pact. It has also aroused jubilation in the maritime provinces where there has been considerable nervousness about raids by German submarines and in the Pacific province of British Columbia, where there have been real apprehensions about the fate of the seaboard cities and towns in the event that relations between Britain and Japan, now very delicate, deteriorate into actual belligerency.

There is also great satisfaction that the board has got down to work with such celerity and that the proceedings at its opening sessions at Ottawa were so harmonious. The naval and air experts of the United States, who are now with their Canadian confreres inspecting the defenses on Canada's Atlantic seaboard will discover that a reasonably efficient network of them already exists. They will also find in Newfoundland a large, new aerodrome at Gander Lake and 40 miles eastward at Botwood a fully equipped seaplane base. So Canada and the ancient colony of Newfoundland will be able to make some valuable contributions to the common defense pool.

MEANWHILE the wider implications of the pact are being carefully studied by authoritative experts who are making pronouncements about it. It evokes special enthusiasm among the more extreme Canadian Nationalists. One of them, Prof. A. R. M. Lower, of Winnipeg, in the last edition of the Financial Post, lauds it in these lyrical terms:

"Out of tragedy has come a miracle. Out of the destruction of peoples in Europe has come action in America which could never have been achieved in peacetime. The Canadian-American decision to tackle the defense of this continent in partnership ranks easily as one of the most important events in our history. It may open the door to a future so vast as to stagger the imagination."

The joint board at once recalls the International Joint Commission which has for nearly 40 years been quietly engaged in the successful solution of a continuing series of thorny frontier problems and has established a unique record of achievement in this line. The new board, in light of the established axiom that "defense depends upon policy," will perforce have to bring the two governments to cooperative decisions about common action in the high field of international policy.

Since the close of the last war Canada has nominally enjoyed complete autonomy, which extended to the field of foreign affairs. In practice her successive ministries have shown little disposition to abandon a spirit of colonial subservience to Downing Street in the field of foreign affairs. From 1935 onward a Liberal government at Ottawa acquiesced complacently in the disastrous policies of the ill-starred Conservative ministries of Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Chamberlain, and neither had the courage nor the imagination to strike out a line for itself or exercise influence which might have been decisive to stop the retreat before fascism which was in progress.

Mr. John MacCormac, lately Ottawa correspondent of the New York Times, has in his book, "America's Problem," narrated in lucid fashion the deplorable story of Canadian foreign policy in the period 1920-1939. Among intelligent Canadians the validity of his indictment is not seriously questioned. Canada in those years was trying to get the best of two worlds: she wanted to retain the honor and glory of partnership in the British Commonwealth but she also aspired to avoid full open acceptance of the obligations attendant upon such partnership. Today the foolish dream that isolation is possible has been shattered and she is honoring her partnership obligations in generous measure.

BUT IT IS CRYSTAL clear that the old order of things can never be resumed and that the Canadian people cannot afford, as they did after the last war was won, to consider that their job was done and that they could safely relapse into concentration of their domestic problems under the sheltering aegis primarily of Britain and secondly of the United States, now they have entered into a definite partnership with the dominating power in North America. In addition to cooperating in the organization of defenses, the government must face in consultation with the Government of the United States, as long as the pact endures, the great issues of international policy. For example, a Canadian government participates in a peace conference at which the United States is not represented, it will almost be bound before it indorses any settlement to ascertain the opinion of Washington about it. British imperialists will undoubtedly look askance at such a development, but liberal opinion in Britain will not take it amiss and will regard it as an almost inevitable outcome of changed international conditions.

Meanwhile at Ottawa, ministers freed from parliamentary duties have been concentrating their energies upon the national war effort. At present Canada has two full divisions plus ancillary troops in Britain and maintains scattered garrisons in Iceland, Newfoundland and the West Indies. At home, recruiting has been so satisfactory that the Canadian Active Service Force is now virtually up to its authorized strength of about 150,000. Col. Ralston, the minister of national defense, was lately able to announce that the Third Canadian Division will be mobilized early in October somewhere in the maritime provinces and that by the middle of December a fourth division will be fully organized and equipped although its units will remain at their training centers.

He also disclosed that substantial progress had been made with the organization of tank troops in Canada and made the prediction that the present phase of the war would only be temporary and that Britain at no distant date would launch an offensive with Canada's First Division in the thick of it. Very encouraging progress is also being made with the Commonwealth Air Training scheme and Mr. J. S. Duncan, the deputy minister for air, recently announced that by September 1 about 60 of the 115 establishments planned under the scheme would be in operations and that at least 3,500 air crew students would be in training.

The period of training for the different classes of airmen has been shortened by six weeks and by the beginning of 1941 there should be proceeding from Canada a steady stream of fully trained reinforcements for the British Royal Air Force.

THE REGISTRATION of all citizens of Canada over the age of 16 was successfully completed on August 19, 20 and 21, and the experts of the bureau of statistics are now engaged in sorting out the different categories. It has been decided that the first group of draftees will be called up for their military training about October 9 and that it will draw from young men in the 21-year age group. Regulations to govern the draft system have lately been promulgated and their enforcement will be entrusted to 13 boards, one for each military district with a judge as chairman of each. Exemptions from the draft are conceded to judges, members of the clergy and religious orders, members of the military and naval and air forces on active service and of the non-permanent militia, cadets entered at the Royal Military College, policemen and officials of penitentiaries, asylums and mental hospitals. The registrars will prepare immediately lists of men who on July 1, 1940, had attained the age of 21 and who were on July 15 unmarried or widowers without children and they are also being instructed to prepare four further lists covering—

(1) Men between 21 and 24 engaged in agriculture, fishing, trapping, lumbering or some other seasonal occupation.

(2) Men of the same ages who are students.

(3) Men who are already enrolled in some armed force.

(4) All other men of those ages who will be classified in "the immediate call list."

It is from the latter that the successive batches of draftees will first be called up. Seasonal workers will be allowed to train at what seems the most suitable time of year for them and provision is made for registrars to furnish employers, like financial institutions and manufacturers, with the numbers of men in their employ likely to be called up for military training within the year in order that the employers may formulate plans for letting them take their training with the least inconvenience to industry or business.

The boards are also empowered to give exemptions to prevent the impairment of the working forces of essential war industries. Students will be given military training at their universities under special arrangements and an interesting exemption from the draft is conceded to those two strange sects, the Doukhobors and the Mennonites, who came to Canada under an agreement that they would never have to submit to military training, which is contrary to their religious tenets.

Fair Enough

A False Standard

HAROLD ICKES is still insisting that Wendell Willkie went back to his old home town of Elwood, Ind., to make his acceptance speech only because he "wanted to get away from his New York setting," and I will grant that this return of the boy who made good to the scenes of his one-gallus childhood was first-class political hokum. It was a form of baby-kissing, the more annoying to Mr. Ickes because when President Roosevelt goes back to his old country home—whether to Hyde Park, N. Y., or Campobello Island—he finds himself in a baronial setting of inherited wealth.

Now, of course, it is legitimate to inherit wealth, as Mr. Ickes would stoutly maintain if anyone should try to divest him of his own inheritance, but it is equally legitimate to earn wealth. However, I am not sure that Mr. Ickes fully concedes that Mr. Willkie could have earned his wealth legitimately, for, in speaking of his desire to "get away from his New York setting," Mr. Ickes seems to imply that anyone who lives here on the high side of comfort must have stolen his money unless it came to him by inheritance.

BY THAT STANDARD any New York man who happened not to be born of rich parents or who did not marry a fortune and still managed to make good in New York would automatically convict himself of thievery. This is a false standard because there are not enough rich parents or rich wives to supply the demand, aside from the fact that some poor young men marry by ear, so, to speak, and not by checkbook, but still reserve their constitutional right to make good if they can.

However, Mr. Willkie already has declared his intention, if elected, to file a schedule of all his possessions, and I suggest that now he offer to reveal the source of every dollar of his money and invite Mr. Ickes to do the same. Certainly no man would put himself up for the Presidency knowing that in the midst of his campaign someone could destroy him by showing that he obtained his holdings by methods of which the voters would disapprove. And just as certainly Mr. Ickes must be confident that there was nothing discreditable in his own transition from barefoot boyhood to luxurious manhood and the possession of two handsome dwellings in regions properly describable as exclusive, which is a synonym for snobbish.

THEREFORE, inasmuch as he has made an issue of Mr. Willkie's "setting," Mr. Ickes doubtless would be willing to explain how, in a life devoted to the altruistic service of the little man, he himself acquired not one setting but two, both at least as opulent as Mr. Willkie's Fifth avenue apartment. Not only for the purpose of a showdown in an issue which he himself has raised but for the guidance of the youth of today who also would like to make good to the extent of two big country homes without descending to the level of vulgar trade or big business, Mr. Ickes doubtless will be willing to tell the world how he made good.

Approaching the Elwood demonstration from another angle, Mr. Ickes also insists that New York and not Elwood is Mr. Willkie's proper home and finds hypocrisy in the acceptance party on that score. Another day I will examine the permanent, ineradicable quality of Hoosierism as observed in city-broke Hoosiers of my acquaintance, but for today I would like to cite an incident which seems to me to be something more than a parallel.

THE LAST TIME Ed Kelly, the leader of the Chicago gang of the Social Democratic Party, was running for mayor, Mr. Ickes, employed in Washington and residing in Maryland on one of his two estates, got it in his head to go out to Chicago and run against Kelly, who was then, to his way of thinking, a very bad influence in American political life. He seriously entertained this idea for some time, although he was by no stretch of the imagination a resident of Chicago and was by all honest and legal standards ineligible for municipal office there. His other dwelling was in the exclusive or snobbish suburb of Winnetka, many miles from Chicago, which is a refuge of those who can't stand the noise and discomfort that must be borne by the little man, for whom the heart of Mr. Ickes ever bleeds, and an escape from Chicago's taxes and misgovernment.

Nevertheless, actually residing in Maryland and with his nearest residential outpost some miles from Chicago, Mr. Ickes purposed to run for mayor of that city and was not deterred by an consideration of hypocrisy but by his age. He could fabricate a legal residence, but he thought that at his age it wouldn't be wise to make the fight.

And how do I know?

That is a fair question.

Mr. Ickes told me so.

Republicans Sell Seats for Glimpse Of Roosevelt

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 1 (AP).—President Roosevelt's entourage will pass the Willkie for President Club headquarters here when it moves from a railroad station to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park where the President will speak on Labor Day.

Unabashed, the Republicans planned accordingly.

Today they placed in the headquarters window a sign bearing this legend:

SENATOR McNARY AND WENDELL WILLKIE
Who speaks for the Republican Party? asks Ernest Lindley in his article on this page in which he argues that the Presidential campaign so far has developed no clear-cut issues between the contending elements

No Clear-Cut Issues

By Ernest K. Lindley

Presidential Campaign To Date

THE CAMPAIGN, so far, has developed no clear-cut issues. On the Republican side it is less a bid for approval by a party with a program than a series of individual professions of belief. The Roosevelt Administration knows in a general way what it stands for. It stands for its record. But since the Republicans don't know what they stand for, it doesn't know quite where and how to hit them.

Willkie attacked the President for hurling insults at the dictators. He said it was dangerous. Then he turned around and delivered as defiant a challenge to Hitlerism as any leading public figure has issued.

Willkie indorsed most of the New Deal domestic program, but attacked the philosophy underlying it. One of the elements in the New Deal he did not indorse was the power policy.

But McNary has come out with a ringing indorsement of the Roosevelt power policy—by opposing which Willkie made himself a national figure and the favored spokesman of anti-New Deal business men.

THE POWER PROGRAM is the outstanding —in fact, the only important—example of Government competition with private business. 'Stop Government competition with business!" has been a regular battlecry of the orthodox Republicans for seven years. We have been told in thousands of speeches that such competition was a serious deterrent to business recovery. According to McNary it must be something else that has held back business recovery. For he favors more Government development of our hydroelectric resources. He likes these power projects, especially when they are in the Northwest. Yet for years we have heard in hundreds of Republican speeches that there was already a surplus of electric power in the Northwest, and that the big Columbia River development was a conspicuous waste of public money.

McNary is for most of the rest of the New Deal, too, but is against what he calls "statism." He is especially strong for the New Deal farm program, which is the New Deal's most comprehensive venture into what McNary labels "statism." His main criticism is that the New Deal farm program has not produced enough results. So he proposes one further step into "statism" and one additional subsidy to keep the budget out of balance. This is a subsidy to stimulate production of farm products which hitherto have been imported.

McNARY ASSAILS the Hull trade program, which Willkie formerly lauded as the soundest part of the Roosevelt program. More recently Willkie said it was no longer a live issue because of the war. But McNary thinks it is live enough to merit a major attack now.

Meanwhile, the Republicans in Congress go their own way. As Wallace pointed out, only four weeks ago the House Republicans voted 106-38 against funds for commodity loans, a vital element in the farm program. And he recalls that in 16 years Representative Joe Martin, Willkie's hand-picked campaign manager, has never voted for "one vital and constructive farm law."

Are Eastern Republicans, and especially the business men who are the chief financial supporters of the G. O. P., any more in favor of the New Deal farm program than they were in 1936?

The campaign, as Wallace depicted it, is Roosevelt vs. Hitler. A vote against Roosevelt is a vote for Hitler. Yet Willkie has gone as far as Roosevelt in denouncing Hitlerism. He saw the Wallace speech coming and tried to take the edge off it at Elwood. Willkie's nomination and acceptance speech were generally interpreted abroad as assuring substantial accord between the major parties on foreign policy. Anti-Nazi businessmen and journalists were the vanguard of the movement to nominate Willkie. But according to Wallace the Republicans are the party of "appeasement," even though they may not know it yet.

THE REPUBLICANS assert they can do a better job of building our national defenses than Roosevelt can. But for seven years he has been ahead of them on national defense questions. And he now has mustered some of the best business talent in the Nation to expedite the making of armaments. Can Willkie suggest anyone who can do this job better than Knudsen and Stettinius and their associates?

What does Wallace mean by "appeasement?" Does he mean to say that no matter what happens there shall never be any trade between the Western Hemisphere and a Europe under Nazi control? We are entitled to an intelligible explanation of Wallace's dark insinuations. What would constitute appeasement under various conditions? Who are the "appeasers" who have a grip on the Republican Party? Are they the same business men who are now being asked to cooperate, and in most cases are responding promptly and energetically, in the national effort to build and equip a great Navy and air force and a modern Army? Are they the conservative Republicans and the conservative organs of opinion which have been in the forefront of the fight for conscription?

The campaign doesn't make sense. The American electorate is entitled to know what a candidate really means—if he means anything—when he denounces a policy in one breath and applauds it in the next. It is entitled to more than generalizations. Most of all, it is entitled to know who—if anybody—speaks for the Republican Party.

Yacht Hits Reef; Twelve Rescued

New London, Conn. (Sunday), Sept. 1 (AP).—Twelve persons were brought ashore by the Coast Guard early today from the 96-foot motor yacht, Althea, reported hard aground and "leaking very badly" near Little Gull island, about eight miles offshore from here in Long Island Sound.

Case of O. P. Quirtz

"Business is showing signs of a pickup," we said to Oliver P. Quirtz, a business friend of ours.

"I'm afraid so," he said sadly.

"Afraid!" we exclaimed, thinking we had misunderstood him.

"Yes, scared, in fact," said Mr. Quirtz. "It's not a very pleasant thing to contemplate. Imagine being thrown smack up against a business recovery after all these years. It depresses me."

"But you're a businessman," we pressed, still puzzled.

"Yes, that's just it."

"You've been squawking about business being bad for years."

"True, but now that there is a sort of recovery, I'm upset by it. I got so used to doing nothing of importance. Take golf . . . I've done nothing else but play golf since 1932. If by any chance there were any calls for me at the office, the staff knew they could get me at the club. I rather enjoyed it. All my life I had thought golf was just something indulged in to get away from my business. Now I find that business is just something that takes me away from my golf."

"Cheer up," we urged. "A return of good business might be hard for you to stand at first, but you could adjust yourself."

"I think not," said Mr. Quirtz. "During the last few weeks things have picked up at the office and I've tried to get interested in it, but it's no use. I don't mind having customers if they come in before noon, but I can't get back to the custom of staying on the job after lunch, particularly in weather when I know Harry Hoffman or Bob Heemans will call up."

"Who are they?"

"Hoffman is a businessman who took to enjoying himself when the depression began and now he can't stop. He's founder of the L. P. B. R."

"What's the L. P. B. R.?"

"The League to Prevent Business Recovery," said Quirtz. "He founded it as soon as he saw signs that things were picking up. He feels a recovery will do his golf great damage."

"Who's Heemans?"

"He's another business mogul," explained Mr. Quirtz. "For 25 years he kept his nose to the grindstone. He was the town's toughest businessman. He never took a day off and used to go to the office nights. Then came the big smash. At first he just went to double features and baseball games. Then he took up golf. He's been playing most of the time ever since Roosevelt entered the White House. He's head of the A. I. O. T. W. L. T. U. T."

"What's that?"

"The Association of Industrialists Opposed to Working Like They Used To," explained Quirtz. "I belong to both. Charter member, in fact."

The telephone rang.

"That's one of the boys now!" exclaimed Quirtz, his face lighting up as he slammed his desk. He answered the call and grabbed his hat and a new mashie.

"We businessmen didn't have any idea how to relax until business went to hell," he said as he rushed from the office. "We had to stick around doing nothing but making money. That was before we got a taste of idleness. The good old days may they never come again."

Public Still Takes Planes Despite Crash

Airport Officials Report Business Is Doing Normally

The airline crash that terminated commercial aviation's perfect record of 1" months and four days has not frightened the air-traveling public—judging from flight reservations at the Washington airport yesterday.

The Pennsylvania Central and American lines reported that no reaction on the part of their patrons was observable. An American official said that 13 passengers went out for Chicago on the 8:50 a. m. plane yesterday, "a mighty good showing for a Sunday morning."

The number, he said, was higher than the average Sunday morning load. The Pennsylvania Central said yesterday's business was normal.

The lines agreed that any reaction would be difficult to judge immediately because a slump generally accompanies Labor Day or other holidays.

One official said he could not think the tragedy would hurt aviation because people realize that the mechanical element had to be dealt with in flying, as in every other form of transportation.

Rumania's Fate

By Barnet Nover

Frontier Revision With A Meat-Ax

AT VIENNA last week the foreign ministers of Germany and Italy put on their version of Versailles and in so doing made Versailles look like an exercise in statesmanlike magnanimity.

At the Paris peace conference, after all, some pains had been taken to draw frontiers more or less in accordance with the principle of self-determination even though, in practice, this principle was sometimes ignored in favor of historic, strategic or economic considerations.

It was impossible then, it is impossible now, to draw Europe's frontiers in such a way as to eliminate all minorities. There is no doubt, however, that the peacemakers at Paris could have done better than they did. Yet it can be said to their credit that post-Versailles Europe had far fewer individuals living under alien rule than was the case before the World War or is the case now. And the Versailles Treaty did, after all, contain certain safeguards for the minorities.

AT VIENNA the Axis powers were ostensibly engaged in mediating between Hungary and Rumania over the Transylvania problem. Actually they came to lay down the law to Rumania and did so without wasting much time and without reference to any such old-fashioned principles as self-determination. King Carol was given no choice in the matter. He was told to accept—or else!

There is no sense wasting any pity on Carol or his regime. They deserve none. The servility which the Bucharest government displayed in jumping on the Nazi bandwagon, after the fall of France, was bound to have just such a reward. Yet the Vienna dictate involves more than the fate of the Rumanian ruler and those with whom he has surrounded himself; it involves the fate of millions of innocent people whose bitterness is now being given full vent in riots and demonstrations throughout Rumania. At Vienna they were treated like chattels. Their anger at the way they have been betrayed by their rulers is justified.

TO SUGAR-COAT the bitter pill which Rumania has been asked to swallow, Hitler has given the kingdom his solemn pledge to protect Rumania with the German army. Rumanian statesmen are making what they can of this pledge to assuage the anger of the populace. But the pledge is meaningless.

Presumably it means that Germany will resist by force any attempt by Russia to extend her frontier at Rumania's expense. It probably has a far more sinister connotation. It may mean that Germany intends to use Rumania as the spring-board for further expansion in southeastern Europe. No doubt as "protector" of truncated Rumania, Hitler will have no difficulty in finding an excuse to send his army into that nation. Nor will he grieve if Carol is now forced out as a result of the popular Rumanian revulsion over the Transylvanian agreement. Carol's successor, whoever he may be, is certain to be even more amenable to the Fuehrer's desires than the present monarch has recently shown himself to be.

RUSSIA'S ROLE in the events of the past week is not at all clear. Was Stalin playing Hitler's game by threatening an attack on Rumania, thus at one and the same time frightening the Bucharest government and giving Germany and Italy a chance to step in? About that one cannot be too sure, although the speedy subsidence of the Russian threat the moment the Vienna conference was called into being is suspicious. Yet having taken Bessarabia and North Bukovina it is difficult to believe that Moscow will be content with a bare foothold in the Balkans. There is a strong possibility that if and when the time is ripe Russia will move on and secure a further slice of Carol's disintegrating kingdom.

For the moment, however, with the outcome of the Battle of Britain hanging in the balance, Stalin may feel that there is wisdom in avoiding precipitate action.

IN THE MEANTIME the sorrow and bitterness manifested in Rumania over the cession of a large part of Transylvania to the Magyars is matched by the rejoicing in Hungary over this triumph of her revisionist activities of the past 20 years.

Actually there is very little reason for the Magyars to rejoice. For Hungary is now more than ever in the Axis camp. With the destruction of the independence of her neighbors—first Austria, later Czecho-Slovakia, now Rumania—her satellite position is increasingly emphasized. She is being made to play the role of lamb fattened for the slaughter. And the butcher is at the door.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Inventors

IN "ENGINES OF DEMOCRACY" (Scribner, $3.75) Roger Burlingame continues the story begun, two years ago, in his "March of the Iron Men"; how inventors have made the American way a collective way. It is the story of the Atlantic cable, the transcontinental railroad, of telephones and typewriters, barbed wire and cameras, automobiles and airplanes, dams and zippers, and what they have done to America.

The zipper, Mr. Burlingame points out, was invented in 1893, but America wasn't ready for it. People then did not mind taking time dressing and undressing; we had not yet rushed into this zipper age. . . . Barbed wire ended the old open range and set a punctuation mark after the last frontier. . . .

We know, after a fashion, who invented the phonograph and the electric light bulb, but who invented the railroad? Society, answers Mr. Burlingame. . . . Steel built the railroads and the factories; iron and steel made the big cities possible, but today steel automobiles are "gnawing like termites at the bases of our skyscrapers," destroying the old need for concentration. . . . Waterpower and electricity made the great industrial revolution of the twentieth century; they forced a pattern of collectivism on the American community; the controversy about power arises from a "lag" in our social patterns: we still apply individualist thinking (which, even in the 1870s, was an afterglow of a vanished pioneer past) to a present-day reality which industry itself has collectivized.

SUCH ARE some of the perspectives opened up in Mr. Burlingame's fat book. It is, in a sense, two books; one a history of invention, the second a series of essays upon the effects of invention upon society. He skims the history of the cables, the railroads, telephone and typewriters, linotype and radio, of photography from daguerreotype to Disney, of roads and automobiles, phonographs and chemical farming. A marvelous series of nineteenth-century woodcuts richly illustrates this text; and the essays give it perspective.

It is almost too much to pack into a single book, and Mr. Burlingame writes with a mellow tolerence that sometimes seems to pack several contradictory philosophies into a single paragraph. He is an apostle of invention, ready to concede that it made the buccaneering industrialists of a half century ago essential, and also the collectivism of the New Deal; he is an enthusiast for the automobile (though politely skeptical of turn-'em-in-every-two-years economics), and he glows at the thought that the addition of alcohol to gasoline will turn abandoned acres into corn and artichokes, and so restore the antique balance under which the farmer grew his own fuel. He holds that commercial control of radio in America has maintained democracy, while government control of Europe has become an instrument of dictatorship; he also holds that the thumbers on the roads, the share croppers of Arkansas, are victims of industrial regimentation which might be alleviated by more Government planning. He likes almost everything and everybody. Perhaps it is his very eclecticism which gives his book its rambling charm—more charm than punch.

FREDA UTLEY'S "The Dream We Lost: Soviet Russia Then and Now" (John Day, $2.75) is perhaps more interesting as a psychograph of a type of romantic idealist than as a picture of the harsh life of Russia today. Miss Utley began as a nice English girl haunted by a Puritanical conscience: she felt it was wrong to live comfortably and enjoy happiness "as long as the majority of mankind starve and toil without joy." So, just after the first World War she joined the British Labor Party; by 1923 she was passionately defending Russia; in 1927 she visited her mecca, Moscow, and, returning, joined the British Communist Party. "I really believed," she said, "that the gates opening upon the road to paradise had been unlocked to mankind" (by the Bolsheviks)" and all one need do was to convince the workers of one's own country of the need to overthrow the capitalist class and join up with the U. S. S. R."

She married a Russian and went live in Russia. Her husband had a good position in the Soviet foreign service, but he, too, was haunted by a sense of guilt. He became convinced that "he suffered a moral disadvantage as a privileged intellectual working in comfort abroad and ought to come back (to Moscow) and suffer with the mass of the people. He suffered; so did his wife. Not the least of their suffering was the growing sense that their physical suffering was in vain; they lost their faith, though for a time they dared not avow this even to themselves.

Miss Utley wrote books—part scholarship, part Communist faith. In April, 1936, in the night, her husband was arrested; she has not seen him since, and she has had no message from him since May, 1937. Today she sees her erstwhile paradise as living hell; she thinks Stalin's Russia more barbaric than Hitler's Germany, and would compromise with Hitler to save the world from Russia; and she preaches her new faith with the same apocalyptic fervor as once marked her sermons in behalf of Communism.

Her circumstantial accounts of the cruelties of life in Russia are appalling; but what stands out in the book is the unconscious self-portrait of a type of mind which sees everything in blacks and whites. Bertrand Russell told Miss Utley in 1926 that if she could master the theory of relativity it would cure her of Bolshevism; but she renounced his physics for the absolutism of her dream. Her brother perhaps understood her better. About the time she went to Russia he took refuge in the South Seas, and died there. In one of his last letters he wrote: "We neither of us seem quite to have found our new world. Moral—do not read your children romantic tales in their infancy. However hard-boiled they may become afterward, the original taint remains. Tell Freda to teach her son to list the maxims of La Rochefoucauld as his first primer."

Came the Dawn . . .

FOR A QUARTER OF A MILE THE WRECKAGE WAS STREWN—THIS PICTURE WAS MADE AT DAWN AS THE MIST ROSE FROM THE VIRGINIA FARM FIELD IN WHICH P. C. A. AIRLINER CRASHED AND THE GRIM TASK OF IDENTIFYING BODIES OF 25 KILLED WAS BEGUN.

Largest Piece Left— This bulk of tail assembly was the largest piece of wreckage that remained of the P. C. A. liner that carried 25 to their death. Note wheels (arrows 1 and 2) and tail wheel (arrow 3)

Associated Press Photos.

Lovettsville, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Today a bright sun beating down on the crash-scarred clover field disclosed a picture of incomparable horror.

As haggard ambulance crews assembled the bodies, a Pennsylvania Central Airline official said the airplane that crashed 25 persons to instantaneous death apparently struck the ground with both throttles wide open. But there was no clew as to what sent the giant airliner plummeting to the foot of the Blue Ridge Mountains during a cloudburst yesterday afternoon.

Virtually all the bodies appeared to have been severed. Unofficial observers said the passengers apparently were buckled in their seats and were literally cut in two by the impact.

Engines Wide Open

J. H. "Slim" Carmichael, vice president of Pennsylvania Central and a former pilot on the same route, said apparently both engines were wide open, but he would not estimate the speed of the plane when it crashed a few minutes after leaving Washington en route to Pittsburgh.

There was no indication of an explosion before the plane hit, he said, and the distance some portions of the bodies and debris were thrown might have been due to impact alone. The bodies were scattered over a 25-acre area.

Carmichael, investigating the crash with Civil Aeronautics Board authorities, the F. B. I. and local officials, said signs of fire about the plane might have been due "to the atomization of 400 gallons of gasoline." Any fire, he added, would have been squelched by the rain, pouring onto the soaked field.

Bodies Removed to Leesburg

County officials altered their previous stand at about 3 a. m. and granted permission for the collection and removal of the bodies to nearby Leesburg, Va.

For three hours before dawn in the glare of powerful floodlights generated by an emergency unit set up in the field, undertaker assistants carried the mangled bodies to three hearses.

They labored through ankle-deep mud, hacked down cornstalks in adjoining fields which caught portions of the bodies catapulted, and sorted through a mass of twisted metal and machinery.

Fuselage Scattered About

Among the remains of victims lay clothing, shoes, hats, handbags, money, personal effects and hundreds of bits of metal from the planes' fuselage, spread about like confetti.

Almost in the center of the field stood the tail assembly, bent and twisted and up-ended as if it had rolled over and over after breaking loose from the ship's main section.

To the right and left were the shattered wing portions, and all about lay other pieces of the $129,000 Douglas airliner.

Richmond to Celebrate Three-Ply Film Premiere

'Howards of Virginia' on Three Screens; William Gargan Slips in and Slips Out; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE "WORLD PERMEER" continues to flourish. Once again it has worked itself around to the turn of Columbia Pictures. It will be recalled, with mingled thrills and shudders, that the last eventful premiere screening engineered by Columbia was that of Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," which still, in some quarters, is a bone—or is it boner—of contention. But this week it will be something else again.

BELL

Appropriately selecting Richmond, Va., as the scene of the event, Columbia on Wednesday night will project a three-ply premiere of Frank Lloyd's production of "The Howards of Virginia." The film transcription of Elizabeth Page's novel of "The Tree of Liberty" will occupy no less than three Richmond screens, come Wednesday night. It will be squirted onto the silver sheets of the Byrd, State and Westhampton theaters simultaneously, with practically all of the Old Dominion's elite—plus a large consignment of visiting firemen—in attendance.

Drama editors, columnists and radio commentators in uncounted numbers will help make up the entourage, which, insofar as Washington is concerned, will leave tomorrow night at 6:15 by special train to discover as best it may what the shooting is all about. The Warner Brothers organization in the Capital will be heavily represented, as will executives of Columbia Pictures, under the personal escort of that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Columbia's division manager, with headquarters in Washington.

Representing the film capital at the goings-on will be a considerable number active in the production of the picture, headed by Producer-Director Frank Lloyd and Martha Scott, who shares costellar honors with Cary Grant.

A pleasant time will be had by all, one suspects.

Something of the importance and magnitude of "The Howards of Virginia" already has been set forth here. It was filmed in the historic city of Williamsburg, Va., restored to its Revolutionary contours through the generosity of John D. Rockefeller, jr., in order that "the future may learn from the past." An advance brochure on the subject, remarked upon in this space some days ago, indicates that "The Howards" will be one of the notable film releases of the year.

Along with most of the other theater columns in town, this one regrets that William Gargan's itinerary was so scheduled as to bring him to the Capital with his family for a brief visit on Friday. Friday, for most of us, is the most gosh-awful day of the week, what with the new screen openings, the Sabbath issue piling up on the daily and one thing and another. Mr. Gargan, of course, is one of the more stanch and reliable of the cinema's actors, who, like Frank Morgan, Lewis S. Stone, Walter Brennan and numerous others who might be mentioned, prefers to abjure the sinister imposts of stardom in favor of the more constant and desirable assignment to character and "featured" roles. Mr. Gargan's chief aim in coming to Washington was to show his two sons something of the working of the Capital of their Nation. The boys are Barrie, 12—named after the famous British playwright, Sir Mathhew James Barrie—and Leslie Howard, 8. One guess as to whom the latter was named for.

Mr. Gargan will be seen next on the screen with Charles Laughton and Carole Lombard in "They Knew What They Wanted," which, in production, clipped a leaf from the book of George Arliss. The play was rehearsed, scene by scene, for two weeks before anything was shot by the cameras. It then was practically perfect. That is the way Mr. Arliss used to do. But why I particularly wished to meet Bill Gargan was because he is such a warm friend of our old friend, Maxine Doyle, record holder as mistress of ceremonies at the Earle Theater. Max once mailed me a snapshot of her new car. "That fellow with his foot on the running-board," said Miss Derle, "is Bill Gargan. It really is his car. But I have ordered one exactly like it." Maybe we will catch up with him second time around.

The Blackfriars Guild will open its 1940-41 season with the comedy, "The Milky Way." Director Denis Connell announces September 4 and 5 as tryout dates open to the public. Place, 2115 Fifteenth street; time, 8 p. m.

After tonight's moonlight cruise, you can kiss the Wilson Line's streamliner, Mount Vernon, good-by for the season. Labor Day also marks the last "Kiddies' Day" excursion. The program for the day will embrace auditions of juvenile talent, free show, a treasure hunt, prizes and a jitterbug contest at Marshall Hall Park. This will signalize the close of the Wilson Line's eleventh and, reputedly, most successful season on the Potomac.

Howja-Mean-Holiday Note

"Labor Day" is completely correct. And how!

in a scene from the Columbia production of "He Stayed for Breakfast," coming next to the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Gayety Opens New Season Of Burlesque

Inaugural Attraction Stars Vickie Welles And Veteran Comics

"FUNZ-A-POPPIN." The Independent Burlesque Association presents the musical production in two acts and 23 scenes, featuring Vickie Welles, supported by Frank Silk, Eileen Dale, Chick Hunter, Bobby Burns, George Murray, Eileen Hubert, Petite Carroll, Elaine, Ralph Eddy and the Burns Brothers. Dance numbers devised by Eileen Hubert; staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John.

With a record crowd on hand, the Gayety Theater yesterday afternoon opened a new season of fun and frolic, featuring Vickie Welles, a titian-haired beauty who shows promise of becoming one of the Circuit's outstanding attractions.

From the time Matt Mannix and his lads in the orchestra pit strike up the opening tune to a gay and lavish finale, the fans are treated to a fast-moving, funny, and really entertaining burlesque performance.

Miss Welles, as expected, was the real hit of the show. Her wardrobe was stunning. The musical arrangements accompanying her dance routines were in a popular vein and well received.

Veteran Comics Score

The lighter moments of the revue are dedicated to the comedy efforts of Frank X. Silk and George Murray. Both of these boys are veterans of the profession and offered many "skits" and "bits," all which proved effective. Chick Hunter and comely Eileen Dale contribute worthwhile performances in all of their numerous scenes.

Added features include sparkling xylophone selections by Ralph Eddy, and some nifty soft-shoe and acrobatic dancing by the Burns Brothers.

In addition to Vickie Welles, the show also introduces such beauties as Petite Carroll, Elaine and Eileen Hubert, the latter proving herself an exceptionally talented dancer. Incidentally, Miss Hubert is responsible for the elaborate and colorful dance routines offered by the "ladies of the ensemble."

The patriotic number, just before the intermission curtain, is one of the most effective we've ever seen at the Gayety.

Carroll Puts Old Songs in Picture

A nostalgic touch was added to Earl Carroll's picture when the purveyor of pulchritude announced plans to include four of his song hits of 25 years ago in the picture. They are "Dreaming," written in 1911; "Isle D'Amour," written in 1913; "Dreams of Long Ago," written in 1912, and "Give Me All of You," written in 1916.

The New Yorker

Ole Olsen, half of the famous comedy team of Olsen and Johnson, is pinch-hitting today for Leonard Lyons.

My dear Leonard:

COMING IN from Malverne, Long Island, as usual I was looking over my favorite commuter's shoulder. For the first time my curiosity was aroused by the fact that there is one 'I' in Mussolini, two 'Is' in Churchill, one 'I' in Stalin, one 'I' in Hitler, three 'Is' in Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and five 'Is' in Wendell L. Willkie. In other words, L'sapoppin every where.

OLSEN

I was still thinking of it later when a guy calls up and says, "Will you do a guest column for Leonard Lyons?" And your yeses comes out so fast it sounds like a newsreal audiences' greeting to Hitler's picture.

OF COURSE I could tell about the fellow who came up to the box office the other day and said, "I'd like two seats in the balcony for Hellzapoppin."

"Balcony all sold out," came the cryptic reply of the cashier.

"O. K., then two downstairs," he timidly ventured.

"Sold out downstairs!" came the reply of the cashier, who monotonously advised, "balcony sold out, orchestra sold out, all sold out but standing room.

"O. K. I'll take two standing room if I can get them together."

BUT MY GIRL FRIDAY just told me that that's not funny and reminded me that I had just received the following letter from George R. Haines, of Jenkintown, Pa.:

"DEAR OLSEN and Johnson: Wednesday, August 21, was Betty's twentieth birthday so I took her over to New York to see the Fair and Hellzapoppin. We had good seats for the play, Row G.

"Betty is an attractive girl and healthy enough looking, I'd say. So imagine my surprise and consternation, when, after a terrific burst of laughter at your antics, she quietly turned to me and said, "Hank, I've just swallowed a tooth." Well, it seems that she had a false tooth in the back of her mouth, Which naturally, I knew nothing about. Somehow in all the mirth it became disengaged and during a great belly laugh was swallowed.

"I DIDN'T KNOW what to do as the play was only about a half hour old and I hated to leave, but after all you don't swallow a $60 false tooth every night of the week. So we stood up and everybody in Row G thought we were part of the show, especially when I explained our dilemma.

"Over to the hospital we went and they gave Betty some mashed potatoes and told her to go home. We did.

"Some evening Betty and I would like to see the rest of the show. It may be that the management will feel kindly toward us and regard us with a couple of "comps," otherwise Betty is going to have to wait till she's 21.

"THIS STORY is straight from the shoulder. If we can come to see the show again, I'll introduce you to Betty. You'll like her. What we saw was really a howl!

"Anyway, good luck to you, and I hope you will always be able to make people laugh hard enough to swallow their teeth. Sincerely, G. R. H."

Inclosed with the letter was a patient's copy from the Roosevelt Hospital accident room for a first aid fee of $2, which had been paid. So I wrote to George:

"DEAR GEORGE: There are two front seats for you with our compliments, and a dinner, without mashed potatoes, and a corsage for Betty any time at your convenience. All you have to do is advise us WHEN. Merrily, 'Molar" Olsen and 'Bicuspid' Johnson."

AND WHILE WE'RE answering mail, My Girl Friday says, "Read this:"

"MY DEAR MR. OLSEN and Mr. Johnson: Two weeks ago I took my girl friend to see your fine show. Of course this is nothing new, as many young fellows take their girl friends to see your show. But, what is news, is that she did not laugh once during the entire performance, not even a snicker.

"Now she is not an Indian, and she has a sense of humor, so I think and hope. Perhaps this letter is annoying, but I thought you would like to know the reaction of a member of the audience. Your fan, S. S."

MY DEAR S. S.: Thanks for your frankness and greetings to your girl. If she didn't see anything funny in Hellzappopin, no doubt she must be a Dodger fan who had just listened to a broadcast of a game the Dodgers lost. Merrily yours, "Icke" Olsen and "Whacky" Johnson.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 1 (INS).—A rush order at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios puts "Peg o' My Heart on the screen before 1941. A little undercover girl on the lot, Katherine Grayson, a talented child who sings and dances, will make her debut in the charming screen play. I saw a test of the little girl and you may take my word for it she will be a sensation. "Peg o' My Heart" was one of the best pictures Marion Davies made when she was on the M.-G.-M. lot. Remember how like a real little girl Marion looked as Peg? It was also Laurette Taylor's outstanding stage success.

PARSONS

The hit scored by Preston Sturges with his first directorial effort, "The Great McGinty," is responsible for Paramount's decision to give Writer Dalton Trumbo a similar opportunity. Trumbo, author of the best selling novel, "Johnny Got His Gun," sold Para an original called "The Remarkable Andrew." In addition to doing the screen play of his own yarn, he'll produce and direct it.

You'd be surprised how many of the foreign girls and boys were ready last Tuesday to join the line of aliens and register—and disappointed they had to wait an extra day. Charles Boyer wanted to be the first in line. Dolores Del Rio checked every 10 minutes and registered as soon as she could. So did Simone Simon. Olympe Bradna receives her final papers before the December deadline but has registered, anyway, to show her good faith. Among those who have applied for, but not yet received, their final papers are Greta Garbo, Hedy Lamarr, Greer Garson, Sonja Henie, Simone Simon and Cecilia Parker.

Chatter in Hollywood: I never knew there were so many potential reporters until Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier eloped in the dead of night to Santa Barbara. My telephone started ringing about 10 minutes after the knot was tied and continued on at intervals of 20 minutes; the last call coming in at 4 a. m. I was so grateful to all the amateur reporters that I talked with each one, but what it did to my sleep! Oh! on the heels of the Leigh-Olivier wedding comes the additional gossip that Katie Hepburn and Garson Kanin (who accompanied the bride and bridegroom) are Hollywood's latest romancers.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Vincent Prices welcomed a little boy via the Caesarian route at the Good Samaritan Hospital; the Noah Berry, jrs., have dated the stork. She was formerly Maxine Jones, daughter of the popular cowboy star, Buck Jones; Elaine Barrymore walked out on John—at least for the evening; Lorraine Sender, who was Jack Warner, jr.'s heartbeat for so many months, nightclubbing here and there with Garwood Van, orchestra leader; William Fleishman, who has been making his home in Honolulu, is back in town greeting old friends; he dined at the Brown Derby with Constance Bennett.

How these kids grow up! Ann Gillis, who played Becky Thatcher in "Tom Sawyer" such a short time ago, glimpsed at Victor Hugo's with Jimmie Lydon of "Tom Brown's School Days" fame; William Anthony McGuire, well known author, who has been very sick, was feeling better today and I know he would like to hear from all his friends

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Trans-Lux

"Spoils of Conquest," a "March of Time" film dominates the current week's program at the Trans-Lux Theater. This remarkable film about the Dutch East Indies dramatically illustrates the importance of these islands to the United States, the interest and threat of Japan to grab them, and the islands' limited defense abilities and equipment to stop an invasion. Splendidly presented, it is an absorbingly interesting picture.

The News Pictorials, almost devoid of war (battle) pictures, do show United States defense activities; the first meeting of the United States-Canada Defense Committee; London docks busy, despite Nazi statement that there is a total blockade of the English Channel; Britain evacuating children to Australia; the S. S. American Legion arriving safely home; and the United States registering thousands of aliens. Other highlight events in this meaty part of the program are candidate McNary accepting the G. O. P. Vice Presidential nomination, and Lew Lehr making fun out of a parachute wedding at the World's Fair. Also there are a number of sport events.

A Paramount Pictorial has an informing sequence about the manufacturing of optical glass and the art and science of fitting eye glasses. This is preceded by a comedy review of men's hair styles.

"Put-Put Troubles" is the Disney cartoon—it features Donald Duck and the dog Pluto and is a wild riot of fun.

In Hollywood

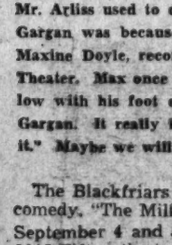
Hollywood, Sept. 1.

Now that "Little Men" is finished, we can really talk about the feuds that went on on that set. The dog and the burro hated each other. The ducks and the chickens scratched. Oakie and Bancroft came to blows. Elsie had to be insured for $8,000 when she went to the San Francisco Fair, and she had a different wardrobe for each scene. But the funniest of all was Gene Towne, when he got the idea to hire Elsie. He was like a whirling dervish—sent a three-page telegram which cost $80, jumped all over his secretary because she had sent it straight, after which he got on the long-distance telephone, which cost $250 more. The first thing Elsie did after arriving was to kick the side out of Towne's desk, by way of thanking him.



HOPPER

When Fred Astaire conducted an orchestra with his feet the other day, and a crowd of 250 extras were paid to watch him, I'll be darned if they didn't beg for more. Also in "Second Chorus." Burgess Meredith becomes a comedian—and now Hollywood is discovering him—and shut my mouth! "Dulcy" has made Ann Southern a glamour girl—you'll see! It wasn't bad years ago for Lynn Fontanne, either.

Some years ago, Metro handed Dorothy Arzner, our only woman director, a story called "The Bride Wore Red." Story was bad, so was the picture—which laid an egg. Dottie was through. I saw "Dance, Girl, Dance" the other night, which Dottie directed, and it's a knockout. She's handed RKO on a silver platter a new star—Lucille Ball, who's been kicking around for quite some time. So much imagination was woven into the story—and there's a different kind of a ballet you'll love. In other words, I went to see a little picture, and came out cheering.

Did you know Shirley Temple's $175,000 per picture salary is split three ways? Half to Shirley, her parents split the rest—saves income tax.

When Dottie had it, studio fought over it. Now that she's lost it, her mother's fighting over it. Oh, I forgot!—It's Dottie's hair. Mother wants it as a keepsake, the studio wants to send it to fans as souvenirs.

Hermann Goering is brutal in war, but a pushover for beauty. 'Tis said he bought 175 of those beautiful overnight Elizabeth Arden cases (which cost $150 each) last year.

Director Bill Seiter went into a kosher restaurant and asked for codfish cakes. They were so delicious he sent for the chef and asked what kind of spices had been used—and only then discovered what he had eaten was gefilte.

Producer Jack Moss wired Cincinnati Zoo for permission to rent Suzie, giant female gorilla, for his mystery thriller, "D. O. A." Central idea of the picture is the transplanting of a human brain into a gorilla's body, and from what I hear, other horror pictures will be pink teas compared with this.

The funniest sight at Andrea Leeds' cocktail party, which started at 4 and ended at 4 a. m., but cleared $1,200 for the Red Cross, was one of our glamour girls, in her haste to sell tickets, backing right into the pool in her silver fox coat and all.

Is it true Martin Dies will get a contract at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when all this Hollywood Red scare is ended? I hear he's terrific.

As Ernst Lubitsch pasted John Steinbeck's table the other night at Dave Chasen's, Steinbeck looked up and said, "He's the only guy I know who can say 'Merry Christmas' and give it a double meaning."

Mrs. Lilie O'Donnell, British Diplomat to Wed

Christopher Bramwell to Marry Mrs. Courtney's Daughter Here Friday; Couple Plans to Live in Georgetown

By Elizabeth Henney

This item might be headed, NEW BRITISH-AMERICAN ALLIANCE, and be quite technically correct, for it brings news of the engagement of a dashing young American widow to the First Secretary of the British Embassy.

Of great interest in Washington is the announcement, by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles E. Courtney, of the engagement of Mrs. Courtney's daughter, Mrs. Lillie O'Donnell, to Cristopher Bramwell, of the British Embassy.

Mrs. Courtney and Mrs. O'Donnell are week-ending on Long Island, but will return early in the week. The wedding will take place in Washington Friday, though where and at what hour have yet to be decided.

Since the British Embassy staff is on full-time duty these days, the couple will not have leave for a real honeymoon, which they will postpone until an indefinite date, but they will slip away to New York for a week-end. When they return they will lease a house in Georgetown.

Mrs. O'Donnell is the daughter of Mrs. Courtney's first husband, the late Robert B. Roosevelt, who was a first cousin of Theodore Roosevelt. The bride-elect was educated at Holton-Arms School in Washington and later went to college in Baltimore. Her husband, Hugh O'Donnell, a former WPA official, died three years ago. Her first marriage, to James Lee, ended in annulment. Mrs. O'Donnell's sister, Mrs. Sidney B. Graves, the former Miss Olga Roosevelt, makes her home here on Foxhall road.

Mr. Bramwell arrived in this country in February, 1938, for duty with the British Embassy, and met his future bride shortly thereafter. He is the son of Mrs. Bramwell and the late Frederick Charles Bramwell, who was Clerk Of The Journals in the House of Commons in London (one of the permanent official positions, corresponding somewhat to Librarian of Congress here).

He was educated at Winchester College, one of the oldest public schools in England (older even than Eton), and later went to Magdalen College, Oxford. A number of Mr. Bramwell's relatives are serving their country in army, navy or diplomatic capacity. His uncle, the late Col. Henry Duncombe Bramwell, who was killed in the first World War, commanded the Fifteenth Hussars. Col. Bramwell's widow is the daughter of the late Lord Rathdonnell.

Mr. Bramwell plays an excellent game of tennis and his improvisations on the piano enliven many a local and diplomatic gathering, where he is much in demand.

Society Awaits Columbus Horse Show

Forest Glen Council, K. of C., Is Sponsoring Benefit Meeting

Sports-minded members of Washington society plan to go to the Meadowbrook Saddle Club grounds, in Rock Creek Park at Chevy Chase, Md., next week-end for the annual Columbus Horse Show, which is to be held Saturday and Sunday with an impressive program.

The meet, a benefit sponsored by the Forest Glen Council, Knights of Columbus, takes on added importance this year, for, with the cancellation of the Inter-American Horse Show, which is ordinarily held in October, it will be the only major show of its kind to be staged in nearby Maryland this fall.

In addition to the 35 classes constituting the program of the show itself, the committee, composed of Eugene E. Ruppert, chairman; W. Douglas Wade, Alfred W. Mersch, Leo G. Koepfle, Vincent P. Lester, J. Leo Lynch, George V. Menke and Jack Allen, has arranged a luncheon, reception and dance in honor of the judges and exhibitors.

Luncheon Planned For Saturday

The luncheon for judges and exhibitors is to be held at the Meadowbrook Club Saturday, while the reception is to take place at Hotel 2400, official show headquarters, that evening from 6 until 7 o'clock with the dance following at the same hotel from 10 p. m. until 1 a. m. Music will be supplied by Watson Powell and orchestra.

Miss Betty Couzens, daughter of the late Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, is chairman of the reception committee. She is being assisted with preparations by Miss Angelina Carabelli and Miss Eva Rabbitt. Miss Rabbitt is chairman of the Horse Show dance committee, with Miss Carabelli, Miss Lillian Crowder and Mrs. Helen Whitebread assisting.

Invitations to judge in the show have been accepted by Miss Margaret Cotter, of Washington and Potomac, Md.; Jack T. Carpenter, of Basset, Va.; D. Otto Furr, of Middleburg, Va.; Danny Shea, of Fork, Md., and Maj. R. M. Stewart Richardson, of Forest Landing, Md.

Many Exhibitors Are on List

More than $2,500 in cash awards and silver prizes is being offered winners in the 35 classes and many of the foremost horse show stables in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia will be represented.

Among the exhibitors who have forwarded entries to Secretary Lester are Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, owner of Springsbury Farm, Berryville, Va.; Capt. and Mrs. O. K. Kane, of Fort Myer, Va.; Lieut. Fred J. Hughes, jr., Fort Myer, Va.; Col. and Mrs. Charles B. Lyman, of Washington; Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Upper Marlboro, Md.; Mrs. Forrest Sherman, of Washington; Miss Elizabeth Morris, of Catlett, Va.; Miss Ann Hughes and Jack Hughes, of Washington; Howard Butts, Keswick, Va.; George Lee, Norfolk, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bradley, of Silver Spring, Md.; Mrs. D. N. Lee, of Middleburg, Va.; Miss Couzens, U. S. Randle 3d, of Washington, and others.

Kent County Horse Show Favored By Clear Skies and Good Attendance

A PRIME WORKER for the Kent County Horse Show is Wilbur Hubbard, of Washington, and Chestertown, Md. Lunching with his mother, Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, the other day at her beautiful old home at Chestertown I found the whole family wondering whether Mr. Hubbard would knock off work for the horse show long enough to come home for a meal.

He did arrive, though, a bit late, and conversation turned on the all-important subject of the weather for the great day. Mr. Hubbard said that the farmer on his place just out of Chestertown, predicted at least decent weather for the horse show and that he was upheld by the Hagerstown Almanac.

In the Kent County Horse Show's 14-year existence it has always been favored by the weather and this past week-end was no exception. Clearing skies brought a good attendance, as if in reward for the hard work of the committee, and everyone was particularly pleased when Mr. Hubbard and his nephew, Hugh (Bud) Morris, of Washington, won the pair jumping, riding Leading Lady and Royal Prince, respectively. Both horses belong to Mr. Hubbard, who later rode Leading Lady to win second place in the jumping class.

MRS. HUBBARD entertained her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, and their children over the Labor Day week-end. Mrs. Hubbard's house at Chestertown is a gem of Colonial architecture and was bought and restored by her about 30 years ago, before the art of restoring old houses had reached its present perfection. The work done by her architect and herself, though practically pioneering in the field, is quite perfect, even in the light of famous restorations such as Williamsburg.

Nothing of the original house that could be saved, dug up, or discovered, was wasted. An interesting original mantel of carved wood was unearthed in the cellar, where it had been discarded when the former owners "did over" the house in the nineteenth century. Proof of the authenticity of the mantel was absolute when it was found to be carved with the same intricate and unusual pattern which decorates the paneling in the upstairs hall.

Across a narrow side-street from Mrs. Hubbard's garden is the old customs house which was in use when Chestertown was a port of entry in Colonial times. In restoring the building the removal of a wall disclosed, a huge brick fireplace, as large as the one in the kitchen at Mount Vernon. It was here that the food for the British customs officers was prepared, and the fireplace was found fully equipped with spits and cooking utensils, all of the Colonial period. The Hubbards restored the beamed kitchen to its original state and now use it for entertaining, with a view of the adjoining cellars and dungeons as an added thrill for their guests.

THE FORMER United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia and Mrs. Wilbur Carr have been enjoying a vacation at Lake Placid. They recently motored to Fort Ticonderoga to visit the historic restoration and to lunch with its owner, Stephen Pell. Mr. Pell is the father of Robert T. Pell, of the State Department.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper have returned to Washington after a holiday spent at Rehoboth Beach with their son and daughter. Before her departure from Rehoboth pretty Janet Clapper gave a dinner party for some of her young friends at the Beach Club. The dinner preceded the final session of the Nine O'Clock Club, the dancing club which was organized by Bob Driscoll and Janie Stimson for the 'teen-age members of the Rehoboth colony.

The club, which has been a great success, ended the season in burst of glory with a dancing competition for the members. Though all the dancers had made enormous progress during the summer, the first prize went to a young girl who lives just outside Washington at Rockville, attractive Alice Williams. Her partner in victory was Bob Levis, of Newark, Del. Receiving honorable mention were Cynthia James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marquis James, and her partner, Jay Drake. The latter hails from New England and has been spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Lammot duPont, jr., at their home on Park avenue.

After Mr. Driscoll had presented a large silver cup to the winners, the club turned the tables on him and Miss Stimson and gave them a souvenir of the summer. The gifts were very smart handkerchiefs embroidered in the corner with "9 o'clock Club." The donors had rushed all over the surrounding country-side to find a skilled needlewoman to do the lettering.

Nancy Davis Visits at Beach

Miss Nancy Davis, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Jefferson Davis, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Hugh C. Mahaffy and their daughter, Miss Gaby Mahaffy, at the Mahaffy summer home on Surf avenue in Rehoboth. Miss Mahaffy, who is from Wilmington, visited here last June. She and Miss Davis have been friends for many years.

Last week the Mahaffys entertained at a large formal party in honor of Miss Davis and their other house guests, who included Miss Mary Anne Ferrandou, Bain Sparks, Richard Roberts, Sidney Kent, Robert Case and Frank Metcalf, all of Washington.

Others who attended the party included Miss Sara Rodney, Miss Edde Taylor, Miss Jane Winchster, Miss Tothie Jones and Miss Jane Hastings, of Wilmington.

Mrs. Smack—Well, of course, Willkie's simply walking away with the West——

Mrs. Zipper—I don't see how you get that! Clarence says he won't even carry Indiana.

Mrs. Smack—Wait now! George has it from some inside sources that there's going to be a big upset——

Miss Smart—Well, if you ask me, nobody knows how it's going to turn out. Now last night——

Mrs. McPish—Oh, I don't know about that! Perry says the whole country's sick of Roosevelt.

Mrs. Minch—Well, of course, Willkie's just Wall street's tool—that's what Arthur's said all along.

Mrs. Tinkle—Raymond says that's all propaganda.

Miss Wiggle—Well, this friend of mine—he says it all depends on the war.

Mrs. Smack—Oh, say! George heard yesterday that President Roosevelt was terribly worried about the blitzkrieg.

Mrs. McPish—Perry says the next thing Hitler's going to do is to take Portugal.

Miss Smart—Say, nobody knows what he's going to do. Now last night——

Mrs. Tinkle—Raymond says the whole thing's war hysteria.

Mrs. Minch—Arthur says the one to watch is Stalin.

Mrs. Ripple—Clarence is worse down on Stalin than on Hitler.

Miss Wiggle—Well, this friend of mine—this Mr. Twitty, he usually sizes things up pretty accurately—and he says the whole trouble is England's been too slow.

Mrs. McPish—It's Chamberlain. Perry hasn't a bit of use for him.

Mrs. Ripple—Neither has Clarence.

Mrs. Tinkle—Raymond says the whole thing's British propaganda.

Mrs. McPish—We ought to keep our boys at home—that's what Perry says.

Miss Smart—Well, what I say is we should get our heads out of the sand. Now last night——

Mrs. Zipper—Well, nothing's likely to happen over here for awhile—Clarence says.

Mrs. Minch—Arthur says there won't either. He says they'll have to clean up the Balkans first.

Mrs. Zipper—Clarence is perfectly furious at Mussolini about Greece.

Mrs. McPish—Isn't it too bad about Rumania! Perry says there won't be anything left of it.

Mrs. Smack—It's just what Carol deserves. George says if he'd have tended to his business——

Miss Wiggle—Well, this Mr. Twitty, this friend of mine, he's always held up for Carol. He's always said that once Carol settled down he'd be all right.

Mrs. Tinkle—Raymond says all this Balkan trouble is nothing but a lot of propaganda.

Miss Smart—Well, what I say is we'd better do something about Japan. Now last night——

Mrs. Tinkle—Raymond says that's propaganda, too—and war hysteria.

Mrs. Smack—George says we've got to do something in Alaska about Russia. He has some inside information.

Miss Wiggle—Mr. Twitty says we don't have to worry about Russia because there's going to be a famine there.

Mrs. McPish—Perry says there'll be one all over Europe.

Mrs. Tinkle—Raymond says that's just all war hysteria, too.

Mrs. Minch—Well the whole thing is it's a world revolution. Arthur's been saying that all along and nobody would listen.

Mrs. Zipper—Clarence warned everybody about Hitler four years ago.

Miss Smart—Wait now, listen to me a minute. Now last night at the Gabble's I met an unusually interesting man and do you know what he said! . . .

Beauty Secrets

Concealing Blemishes

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

DID you ever start to dress for a special occasion and suddenly discover a bumper crop of pimples or other disfiguring eruptions on your face? If so, half the joy of the outing was spoiled.

However, there was much you could have done about it at the last minute. For one thing there is a "Spot-Stik" put up in lipstick form that covers pimples or minor blemishes. It is waterproof and comes in three shades, light, medium and dark. This is for the occasional pimple or minor blemish.

Birthmarks, dark splotches on the face, neck and eyes or arms may be obliterated with a "Covermark" cream, which was designed by a woman, who is disfigured with a birthmark. So expertly does the cream conceal the vivid birth mark that no evidence of it is seen.

Here are some tips for applying the cream correctly:

Start with a clean skin—free of all creams or grease.

Use the shade of cream that matches the skin surrounding the blemish. If the blemish covers one side of face, you must match the skin surrounding the lower part of the jawbone. If the blemish is on the forehead, the cream should match the coloring on the forehead. If it is on the eyelid or directly under the eye, take into consideration the shadows over the lids and directly beneath the eyes and select a shade that will harmonize with your eyeshadow.

Apply the cream like paint, making sure to put on enough so that none of the discoloration shows. Follow this with an application of powder that blends with the cream and skin tones.

New Accents For Fall

Clothes are largely backgrounds this fall for the personal affectations of the wearer. The plain black wool dress above is a perfect foil for the gleaming pompadour and peruke as well as for the gold bowknot pin. The Monet gold metal bracelet with favorite initials (yours or his) is a pleasant way of introducing a personal sparkle into fall wardrobes

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man's Courtship of Girl Is Marked by Periods Of Deliberate Neglect; What's His Game?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 27. The man is 28. We are both college graduates and he has a profession. I think his basic interests and ambitions already are—or could be—mine. Our general background, social position, education, etc., are so similar as to be almost identical.

I'm no little brown wren, but I'm rather on the quiet side, while he's the life-of-the-party type. He's very popular and always the center of attention, while my appeal is more limited. Nevertheless, I'm considered a good sport and good company, and everyone seems to like me—young and old, male and female. I've always had more than my share of beaus, as well as a number of serious suitors. Considering this, I should be a good foil for his more volatile temperament.

We have gone together for five months. He says he loves me and I am deeply in love with him. The problem is this: Several times he has abruptly stopped asking me for dates—absenting himself for periods ranging from ten days to nearly a month. Otherwise, he sees me twice or three times a week.

Each time I've taken him back and never mentioned his absence until he did, and then didn't indicate in any way that I attached any significance to the occurrence. After his first two absences, he cited reasons for staying away, but none for returning—the implication being that he just had changed his mind about the alleged reasons.

About a month ago I told him for the first time that I loved him, too. Since then he's taken to warning me beforehand of his intention of "breaking things off"—always giving substantially the same reasons. After the first such warning, I told him to "think it over," and four days later he said, "let's forget it," so we did, and continued seeing each other.

Now for the incident which prompts this letter: Upon his recent return from a week-end visit with friends, he telephoned me to break a date, saying he was mad with me because of something they claimed I'd done. When I denied it, he admitted he believed me, but said he was still of the opinion that we needed a vacation from each other—and could he see me in two weeks?

I tried to persuade him to talk it over, but he said "We'd only go over the same old ground and get no where." Needing time to think and seeing nothing else to do, I agreed. His idea seems to be this: We don't understand each other; we don't get along together and he isn't happy in the relationship. Yet he seems unable to give any reason why we don't get along, or to be specific about the source of his discontent. Between his "spells," he seems to be well content and we get along beautifully, in my judgment.

He does seem to love me, and I think I'm the only girl he really goes with. However, he hasn't proposed, although he told me once—after one of his "spells"—that he would have proposed long ago if he had felt we would be happy together.

I want to marry him, because he's everything I've always wanted—providing he really loves me. I feel there must be a sound reason for his behavior, but either he doesn't know what it is or he isn't telling me. I also feel that unless the reason is brought out in the open and discussed, he will keep on taking "vacations," and I can't support much more uncertainty.

Also my taking him back whenever he's ready to come back eventually will undermine his respect for me. Do you think he really loves me? And if so, why wouldn't he want to marry me? I think he does love me, because he's just frank enough to tell me if he didn't. And if he didn't love me, why would he always come back? What shall I do when his current "vacation" is over? ALICE.

Come-on Tactics Of Male Coquette

DEAR ALICE: Your beau is turning in a male coquette's performance, and I don't think there is any "sound reason" back of his actions, but only the desire to bait or goad you into throwing yourself at his head, or his feet, as the case may be. He is meanly fretted by the intolerable suspicion that you may be somewhat more important (or indispensable) to him than he is (as yet) to you. He just isn't big enough to declare himself and take his chances.

He is trying craftily to finesse you into unconditional surrender—in the sense of proclaiming your total, abject love of him—so that he may seize and keep the upper hand in the relationship. What he would do if he gained his goal is problematic. He probably would be as tantalizingly noncommital, as unpredictably neglectful as he has been to date. But he would be more at peace with himself in the relationship, through knowing that he could take you or leave you, as he chose.

It is the fact that he has failed to compel that reassurance, to date, which galls him so. That's why "he isn't happy in the relationship;" why he says "you don't understand each other, etc." Because he can't read you like an open book, or break down your reserves with a few preliminary flirtatious maneuvers, he pettishly avows that mutual understanding is lacking.

But to understand him is, in my opinion, to see how little worth loving he is. So far as character-quality goes, I think he is a second-rater. As proof, I offer the instance in which he listened to, half believed and churlishly acted upon gossip about you retailed by friends of his. That reaction showed a poor quality of friendship for you, and no valorous or chivalrous devotion whatsoever. More than anything else, it implies a stung preoccupation with his own vanity.

What to do when he comes back in two weeks for another reading of your emotional chart? Well, what you really should do is be otherwise engaged; too busy to see him; washed up with his come-on tactics. The closed-door attitude probably would produce a downright declaration and unequivocal proposal—if anything can. I doubt that "catering" or "humoring" tactics will net you anything with him. But if you aren't equal to that bold thrust, then the second-best thing to do is maintain a Sphinx-like reticence concerning your feelings for him, regardless of how plausibly he invites you to confess, or how urgently you may be tempted to tell. New Tidbit for Cocktail Party

Here is a new tidbit for your next tea or cocktail party: Spread rolled out rich biscuit dough with chopped cooked ham blended with a little chopped olives, sweet pickles and onions, and moistened slightly with catsup. Form into a 1½-inch roll. Cut off ½-inch slices and bake, flat sides up, on a greased pan for 5 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve warm.

Now's the Time To Start That Fall Reducing

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S A GOOD old summer custom never to do tomorrow what you can put off until next fall. Well, he it is fall!

After trifling with time all summer, it's a little hard to get down to business—and it may be a bit of a struggle to get your figure into shape, but one look at yourself in a sleek fall outfit and you will be ready and willing to take steps.

All right, hop on the scales. Then do some figuring to see whether you weigh too much. The width of your frame, as well as your height, determines how much you should normally weigh.

Allow for Variation

With thick, heavy-set bones, your normal weight may be as much as 20 pounds more than that of someone with the same height, but small bones and a slight frame. For example, let's say that you are 5 feet 4. Your normal weight will be around 120 pounds if you have a slight frame, or from 125 to 130, with a medium frame; or you could weigh as much as 143 pounds without being overweight if you have a very heavy frame.

To allow for this variation in structure, figure your normal weight on the basis of your first 5 feet of height, allowing 100 pounds for the basic 5 feet with a slight frame, 105 for the average frame, and 110 pounds for a stocky build. Then allow 5 pounds extra for each inch by which the height exceeds 5 feet. If you should happen to have an exceptionally heavy frame, you may be entitled to a further weight allowance of 10 per cent of your total weight.

General Proportions

In general, your proportions are lovely if there is no more than a 2-inch difference between bust and hip measurements and the waist is from 8 to 10 inches smaller than the bust. If you have narrow shoulders and have let your hipline expand, you don't have a pleasing figure, whether or not you weigh too much.

During the month of September each day's articles will deal with some phase of figure proportioning and will help you to perfect your weight and measurements. Tomorrow's article will start you off right by outlining the different programs for types.

Even Unsuccessful Youths Benefited In Stokowky Trials, Says Miss Valiant

DON'T FEEL SORRY for the young aspirants who were denied a place in Leopold Stokowsky's Youth Orchestra. According to Margaret Valiant, National Youth Administration's music director, who supervised the auditions, even the 15,000 unsuccessful applicants benefited by the experience. "The good will tour actually began in the villages," she believes. "No one was sent away disappointed—not even those who showed up with mouth organs or who said they could not read music.

MISS VALIANT

"The 500 whom Mr. Stokowsky auditioned personally had what amounted to a free lesson, for he listened attentively to each one and suggested future training. Many of those whom he did not choose will find jobs with the State orchestras which are springing up everywhere as a result of the tour."

While Stokowsky tours South America, Miss Valiant will visit a number of Western and Midwestern States to help organize orchestras and music schools for youth. She says the widespread response to the Youth Orchestra auditions clearly disproves the fallacy that the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards are our only centers of culture. Some 500 musicians applied from Indiana alone.

WITH THE GARDENS—Think twice before you plant sunflowers outside your kitchen window as one Arlington Village couple did last spring. The plants evidently were distantly related to Jack's beanstalk; they grew and grew until it became impossible to see out of the kitchen. By now, if anyone wanted to snip off one of the platter-sized blooms, he'd have to lean out a second-floor window.

Next time a heat wave strikes town, walk gingerly in your apartment and keep a weather eye out for the ceiling. The combination of extreme heat and high humidity during the last hot spell apparently was responsible for an epidemic of loosened plaster. In one Sixteenth street apartment the whole living room ceiling suddenly fell on the floor, ruining an expensive rug and raising cain with the bric-a-brac. A couple of days later the same thing happened in the dining room of a boarding house next door, where the table was set for breakfast. Fortunately the breakfast bell had not sounded and no one was injured, but the noise of shattering china and screaming women roused the neighborhood.

STREET SCENES—Two fascinated sprouts stared into an F street show window, where a window dresser was arranging models. Finally one pointed to the man and said, "How did HE get in there? . . . The black-spectacled shoestring vender in the 800 block of Seventeenth street northwest usually wear the abstracted expression peculiar to the blind. But when a trim young thing with good legs passes by his eyes follow her down the street.

Homes Benefit By California 'Renaissance'

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE SAME dry, hot dramatic countryside that made a setting for the great upsurge of art in ancient Athens and Rome is repeated in the almost mystic beauty of California, where many critics see the beginnings of a new outburst of creative achievements, a modern renaissance.

Not only in the fine arts of

painting, music and the theater is this creative impulse apparent, but likewise in the decorative arts. Here it is not limited to the homes of the rich and mighty but has penetrated also to the simple and humble homes where a charming design of life has been developed.

Architecturally, modern accents have taken hold far more widely here than in other sections of the United States. But it is a mellow modern, that blends genially into the Botticelli landscapes . . . often it is really only a contemporary interpretation of an older style.

In interior decoration the impetus of modern design has also made itself felt in California, even in traditional rooms. In addition, other important influences felt on the West Coast include Hawaiian and other South Sea decorative sources, along with Chinese and Mexican themes and eighteenth century classicism translated into an American idiom, and becoming in translation strangely native and regional. Among recent spectacular exhibits of western decoration, the following seemed to us to be significant straws in the fashion wind:

Colorful Room

Built around a stunning wall panel and a terra cotta torso was a living room which took its colorings from these two works of art, with sunny greens, chartreuse, moss green and terra cotta predominating. The sofa was covered in a terra cotta corded fabric, while a beige and brown textural stripe was used for one armchair and a brown and terra cotta material for another chair.

Built-in book cases of light and dark woods, draperies and handhooked rugs in shades of chartreuse . . . these were scintillating details in a room designed to highlight art treasures.

British Pound Berlin, Claim Heavy Damage

R. A. F. Planes Blast Gun Emplacements On French Coast

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Monday), Sept. 2.—British bombers struck at Berlin in pre-dawn raids Sunday and today.

German authorities minimized the effects of the first raid and said that on the second the enemy was driven off before reaching this capital.

The Sunday morning alarm lasted an hour and 36 minutes; this morning it was 47 minutes. Sunday's raiders dropped three bombs in open fields near the city and a number of incendiary bombs which fizzled out in a western suburb, police declared.

British long-range bombers during the night also were believed striking at Germany's Axis partner, their flights marked by the customary alarms in Swiss cities as they passed over en route to industrial northern Italy.

Blast Nazi Factories

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 1.—Pouncing on Berlin for the second night in succession and the fourth time in a week Royal Air Force bombers battered the aircraft factories, electric power stations and the airports of that city and its environs early Sunday morning the air ministry announced today.

The raids over Berlin, which included some new targets, were carried out despite heavy cloud formations which prevented some of the pilots from locating their military objectives there and forced them to seek alternative targets elsewhere in Germany.

Meanwhile, other R. A. F. machines once more hammered Nazi long range gun emplacements at Cape Gris Nez, across the Channel in German-occupied France.

Factories and oil plants at Cologne, Leverkusen and Magdeburg; docks and shipyards at Emden, railroad yards at Hamm, Soest, Osnabruck and Hanover and various air bases, also were bombed during the night, according to the official commuique issued here.

British authorities admitted the loss of two planes. The German radio claimed three British bombers were shot down in the Netherlands.

British raiders poured many tons of high explosive and incendiary bombs on the Berlin area, starting fires, one of which they saw clearly when they were 30 miles away, en route home.

Raiders who because of the poor visibility could not locate the Berlin points they were instructed to bomb, consulted their navigation maps, picked out alternative objectives, and smashed the railroad junction at Hildesheim, and numerous enemy air bases in Germany, and Holland, including Lastrup, and Arnheim.

Pound Emden Docks

At intervals, throughout the night, relays of British bombers pounded the docks and shipyards at Emden, the air ministry said. Despite the intense antiaircraft fire and the frantic weaving of a great number of powerful searchlights, all the British raiders succeeded in bombing their targets. How much damage they did was not estimated but officials said it was "considerable."

Pilots reported that their bombs landed directly along the west bank of the main Emden dock, while others struck docks and the principal entrance to the harbor.

Fires Started in Cologne

Other sections of raiders attacked the Union Rheinische Braunkohlen Kraftestoff Works at Wesseling, in Cologne, starting big fires after causing heavy explosions.

The Bayer explosive factory at Leverkusen, near Cologne, was also bombed, but the heavy clouds prevented accurate observation of the resulting damage.

Flying through a fierce barrage of antiaircraft fire and a net of searchlights one of which gleamed a bright purple, a coastal command aircraft bombed the oil tanks at Vlaardingen, near Rotterdam, causing what the air ministry described as "great fires." A succeeding wave of raiders found these blazes a big help in locating the same target.

Md. Youth Drowns; Companion Clings To Tree, Is Saved

Frederick, Md., Sept. 1.—William Ramsburg, 16, son of Mrs. Norma Ramsburg, Dublin, near here, was drowned this morning in the swollen waters of the Monocacy River at Biggs Ford, near Walkersville. The body had not been recovered late today.

Ramsburg and Richard L. Hoffman, 15, Walkersville, were swept into the stream. Hoffman caught onto a tree limb and Ramsburg clutched to him until he became weak and released his grip. Hoffman was rescued by Robert Moberly and Charles Kinney. They had been summoned by Charles Green, 17, near Frederick, and Austin Whitmore, 22, Walkersville, who were with Hoffman and Ramsburg.

3,000,000 Men Under Arms In Britain, War Office Reports

Great Army Also Sent to Middle East, Agency Says in Review of First Year; Troops Being Trained for 'Offensive Action'

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 1.—The War Office News Department in a review of the first year of the war said today there are 3,000,000 men under arms in the United Kingdom, including 1,500,000 Home Guards.

"It must not be forgotten in considering these figures that within the last year Britain has sent a great army to the Middle East," it added.

"This army today, with the exception of units of special recruits for local defense is being prepared for offensive action."

Selassie Escaped Italian Bombers

Cairo, Sept. 1 (AP).—American quarters advanced the theory today that Italian bombers might have been after former Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia in the August 23 attack on the border mission post at Doro in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, where two American missionaries were reported killed and two others injured.

These quarters said the Italians apparently believed the Negus, who flew to Africa recently to rally his fighters when the British extended recognition, was in hiding at the mission awaiting a chance to slip across the frontier of his former kingdom.

All French Africa On Britain's Side

London, Sept. 1 (AP).—The governor of Gabun, a district of French Equatorial Africa, cabled Gen. Charles De Gaulle today that the colony had placed itself "under the flag of free France."

Britain, after the French collapse, recognized De Gaulle as the leader of "free Frenchmen."

The Vichy government has announced a "rebellion" in the Chad territory, another part of Equatorial Africa, which also is known as the French Congo.

Gabun's decision to ignore the Vichy government armistice with Germany and Italy brings the whole of French Equatorial Africa to a unanimous decision to continue the war on Britain's side, Gen. De Gaulle's headquarters said.

France Bans Sale Of Rice; Checks Food

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Sept. 1.—One of the Petain government's prime concerns today is the preparation of stocks of food for the winter. A further step in this direction is the temporary prohibition of the sale of rice for human consumption and a ban on its use as feed for animals. This comes on the heels of strict regulation of the textile industry, which is forbidden to manufacture "fancy articles," such as carpets and lace, while artificial fiber must be introduced in all fabrics.

Restaurant menus are strictly limited to three courses, two of which are soup and fruit. At the same time it is recommended that green vegetables be eaten as long as they last instead of dried beans, lentils and such foods.

Because of reduced imports, the available quantities of oil and soap continue to be restricted; sugar and butter also are scarce. In many communities children under the age of 6 are receiving condensed milk from supplies brought by the American Red Cross.

Count of Paris In Foreign Legion

Vichy, France, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Count of Paris, pretender to the nonexistent throne of France, fought with the French army as a Foreign Legion volunteer and has not yet been demobilized, dispatches from Tangiers said today.

These advices, published by the Royalist newspaper l'Action Francaise, said the count, barred from serving in the regular French army by a constitutional clause forbidding his entry into France volunteered in the Foreign Legion air force under an assumed name.

21 U. S. Ambulance Men Reach Portugal

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 1 (AP).—Dr. James V. Sparks and 20 members of his section of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps arrived from Spain today on their way to the United States. The group was arrested in Spain and held two days as Communist suspects.

Kennedy Speaks From Experience

London, Sept. 1 (AP).—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, who has nine children, observed today that fathers should be inured to the annoyance of having their sleep disturbed by air raids.

The Ambassador, dedicating an ambulance donated by his wife at a ceremony in suburban Windsor, where they line, said:

"Bomb dodging may be a new kind of sport to some people, but as far as it interrupts the night's rest it is nothing new to married men who, like myself, have many children."

Young Communists Parade in Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 1 (AP).—Under banners calling for peace and preparedness, 20,000 young Communists marched through Red Square today in observance of the twenty-sixth International Youth Day.

The organ of the Young Communists' league, Comsomol Pravda, said "The Soviet land, thanks to Stalin's wise foreign policy, is not at war but we must be ready for all surprises."

TRADE IN "SAPPHIRE." The very mischief broke loose when the Mayflower Hotel management read The Post announcement that the name of the Carlton Shar-Zad Room was to be changed to the Sapphire Room. It seems that the Mayflower had been quietly doing over its Garden Room, used for banquets, in sapphire colors, had even made up signs and so on changing its name to the Sapphire Room. Now two Sapphire Rooms, one in the Mayflower and the other in the Carlton, are much too much, would be terribly confusing. So the Carlton's Manager Frank Swadley, always the courteous esquire, said he'd think up another name for Shar-Zad, has finally settled upon calling it the Cosmos Room.

So the Carlton's new Cosmos Room will open on September 13, and our town's new Sapphire Room will be the Mayflower's former Garden Room.

Jack Kerr, the keen singing comedian, who pleased so highly in Cafe Caprice last spring, will arrive there again tomorrow afternoon. He played in London revues with Beatrice Lillie just before World War II . . . Matt Windsor, all tanned and refreshed after a month's vacation, will be back in the Anchor Room this afternoon sounding off in those perfect Windsor rhythms.

METRONOME'S NEW MAESTRO. Now it can be told! Grant Thompson, orchestra leader at New York's ultra-ultra Pegasus Club, will be on the bandstand when Wardman's Metronome Room opens for the season next Friday. He'll bring a bagful of entertainers, including Singer Madge Marley, Dee Orr, of the original Bix Biederbacke band, and clowning "Professor" Shingle. Recent engagements of the Grant Thompson band include the Waldorf Astoria and the Rockefeller Rainbow Room.

BOYS CLUB PARTY. Manager Herbert Sachs, of Del Rio, will be host to the Police Boys Club of Prince Georges County at a dinner party at Del Rio tomorrow evening at 7:30. And you can be sure that Manager Herbie will enjoy the party just as much as the boys.

THIS WEEK'S SHOWS. Shoreham Terrace. Harriet Smith's Five Lovely Ladies will do some of the most entrancing of the 350 dance routines they've mastered. Also, Stan Rich, who juggles a cannon ball, an axe and a piece of paper at one time and still has all his fingers and toes. And dancers St. Clair and Day, but naturally.

Lotus. The brand-new, big and hilarious "Coconut Grove Revue" opens today. It's another of the nine Tom Ball revues that are booked all over the East, comes directly from Boston. Dance music by Bill Strickland's Dixielanders and the Continental Trio. Tenor yodeling by big Buddy Shaner.

Maryland Gardens. The "Continental Revue," with a flock of gamesome little dancing beauties, Sidney Boyd's polished vocals and the fancy blues shouting of Yvonne Logan, M. G.'s junior Sophie Tucker. Charming dance rhythms by Nadine's Co-Eds.

Casino Royal. Ballroom dancing on roller skates is this week's new specialty by Loyes and O'Donnell, stars of the Kersten Revue, which is most deservedly held over. Len Lenihan will act as drum major for the cunning Kersten Dancers and there'll be a group of fresh-as-paint novelties. Jack (Jive) Cehaeffer is getting new verses for that "Yes, Yes" song.

Glen Echo will close for the season next Sunday night. Paul Kain's orchestra will wind up its dance music sessions on Saturday eve, since there's no Sunday dancing at Echo. This gives you just six more chances to step to the sugar-and-spice Kain rhythms.

GRANT THOMPSON, top-flight maestro, who will open at the Wardman Park Friday

THAT RIVIERA HARMONY. Pete Macias hadn't played piano for about six years when he formed his Lounge Riviera orchestra, a unit that has evoked admiring praise from such experts as Eddie Duchin. It shows to go ya—but what we don't know. It must be Pete's psychic sense of rhythm plus a gift for assembling a brilliant group of musicians.

CHOICE AND CURRENT MELODY. The enchanting version of "I'm Stepping Out With a Memory Tonight" being novachorded by Milton Davis in the Rainbow Room. . . . "Hejre-Kati," continental number violined ever so prettily by the New Bavarian's Jane Harlow . . . "You Can't Brush Me Off" as brushed off vimfully by the Hi-Hat's Cavaliers and canary Marianne Lee. . . . "Stop Pretending" in Rod Raffell's original version at the Nightingale, with every musician in the band singing the response back to vocalist Tommy Lawrence . . . Betty Davis' extra-pretty warbling of "I'll Never Smile Again" at the Robin Hood. She's a sister of lovely Eve Knight, expected back in the King Cole Room this fall . . . But the pay-off is that combination of "Carolina Moon," "The Moon Comes Over the Mountain" and "When the Swallows Come Back to Capistrani" being played at the Rustic Cabin by Al Shea's band. They play all these tunes at the same time and they sound fine! Believe it or believe it.

If you're downtown today, seeking retreat from the holiday—the Harrington Tavern is your spot. The beverages are tall, tasty and high - powered, the atmosphere soothing, the food excellent and ranging from a snack to a full course dinner . . . If you're in the mood where you must have soft-shell or hard-shell crabs, drop into Dick's Grill, where they're a specialty.

Contract Bridge

"Comparing the oldtime champions with those of the present day seems to be a new indoor sport," writes E. S. G., of Cleveland, who wonders how the masters now meeting at Asbury Park would stack up against the auction wizards.

"And so I ask: How would some of the oldtime auction wizards stack up against the modern card heroes, if the oldtimers had all the system of the present-day game at their command?

"I have a great respect for some of the oldtimers. They played with little card system but much card sense. They were keen card readers.

"One evening I sat behind G. H. Levy, of Hamilton, Canada, and watched him play the defense against a three no-trump bid in a manner that I believe will be of interest to you and your readers.

"Here are the cards and the bidding:

	NORTH
	♠ Q J 10 ♡ 9 5 2 ◇ 7 ♣ J 10 9 8 7 3
WEST		EAST
♠ 7 4 ♡ K Q J 8 4 3 ◇ 9 4 2 ♣ A 2		♠ K 8 3 ♡ 10 6 ◇ K J 10 3 ♣ Q 6 5
	SOUTH ♠ 9 6 5 2 ♡ A 7 ◇ A Q 8 6 5 ♣ K 4

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 NT	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

"Levy sat South, and I had expected him to lead his fourth-best diamond, and then count on his club and heart entries to help him establish his diamond suit. But that isn't the way he played it. He laid down his ace of diamonds, and when he saw the board he next played his king of clubs.

"The fourth-best diamond would have given East the contract plus, but killing West's entry at the very start set the hand."

2,000 See Rodeo Sponsored by D.C. Fire Department

A rodeo sponsored by the District Fire Department as a prelude to the Police-Firemen's Field Day, to be held September 14 at Griffith Stadium, drew more than 2,000 spectators yesterday to Meadowbrook Farm, off the East-West highway.

Highlight of the show presented by Billy Gee and his Wild West rodeo performers, was the lassoing of a 24-inch calf, said to be the smallest in the world. It took Mickey O'Connor, ace lariat tosser, just one throw to do the trick. The Metropolitan Police Boys' Club Band, directed by Leon Brusiloff, provided musical entertainment.

Speakers included Capt. Harold Hardy, of the District Fire Department; William Kruglak, secretary, Firemen's Retiring Association, and chiefs from Kensington, Takoma Park, Silver Spring, and Bethesda.

Tickets for the field day are being sold at $1 and $2, with proceeds going to police and firemen's retiring associations.

Dear Sue:
Miracles do happen . . . Mom finally sees eye to eye with me on clothes. It took a lot of talking and a trip to The Hecht Co. to show her what a gal in her teens ought to wear . . . but when she saw those simply divine YOUNGER CROWD FASHIONS she melted like butter in the sun.
The minute she spotted the superb wool plaid jacket suit with a honey of a notched collar she said that that was what she had intended to buy me right along. 'Course, I didn't say a thing . . . and just took what the heavens had to offer . . . And got the spiffiest white blouse to go with it. And I had NO TROUBLE AT ALL in convincing her to get me a YOUNGER CROWD FASHION dress. It's blue wool jersey and the buttons are red and silvery . . . and the red belt is a perfect imitation of pigskin. It will be grand for dates and such.
And oh boy! you should see what it does for my figure. The Hecht Co. buyer says that's because it, like all YOUNGER CROWD dresses, coats, jackets, etc., was designed by young people who make a specialty of girls like us who are too old for kid stuff . . . and not quite ripe 'n' ready for misses' clothes.
When you get back to town, you'd better have a heart-to-heart talk with your mother and get her down there (you can GET YOUNGER CROWD FASHIONS ONLY AT THE HECHT CO. IN WASHINGTON) for your wardrobe. School's starting in a few weeks, you know . . . and you simply can't afford to look baggy this year . . . what with the Junior prom and etc. popping up.
Love and kisses,
Jane

Requiem for Sister Serena

Rites for Nun Will Be Held At Hospital She Long Served

SISTER SERENA

Had Been Nurse at Providence 61 Years and in Charge of Pharmacy 55 Years; Services Tomorrow

In the little chapel of Providence Hospital requiem mass will be held tomorrow morning at 8:30 for Sister Serena, beloved by hundreds of Washington's "south side."

The 81-year-old nun died Saturday after an illness of six years. She will be buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery following the chapel rites.

For 61 years Sister Serena served as a nurse at Providence Hospital, and for 55 years she operated the hospital pharmacy. Her life was devoted to the care of the sick of southeast and southwest Washington.

About five years ago she became invalided and was forced to take to wheelchair, and although she had to give up compounding of prescriptions, she continued work by making cardboard boxes for the pills and capsules, when the District law demanded passage of examination in order to practice, she won her certificate.

A native of Ireland, she came to this country as a child. A sister and nephew survive.

Minister Questions Survival Of Pioneer Spirit in America

Whether present-day Americans can "keep pace with the pioneers in America of 100 years ago" was questioned yesterday by Dr. R. H. Stone in his sermon at the Lincoln Road Methodist Church. His topic was "Christ the Carpenter."

"The history of progressive mankind has been the history of workers," he declared. Christ he termed "a great worker—one who worked with his hands and who came out of a home of poverty."

Citing the large numbers of unemployed and poverty stricken in this country, he said that "Character is not limited by what we have have. Our forefathers often had little besides a sense of God, and out of it came great character which created the United States of America.

"Most Deadly" Force

"We may well be concerned today whether we're growing a race of mankind which can keep pace with the pioneers in America of 100 years ago."

The Rev. N. C. Acton, vicar of St. Andrew's Church at College Park, Md., told an audience at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, that the "most deadly" force in the world today is the "progress of secularism—the denial of God or any sense of responsibility to God."

He declared that "the present age is one of transition and change . . . The decay of democracy and the rise of the totalitarian state—all the changes in our economic system from the old capitalistic system to something, we know not what it shall be."

Apologetic Christians Hit

The growth of Christianity has been imperiled by "an attitude of defensiveness," the Rev. Mr. Acton stated. "We are often so ready to be offended and disheartened when attacks are made upon our Christian way of living. There are too many Christians today who are anxious to make the best possible excuse for Christianity, who are making every effort to discover the most comprehensive apology for their religion."

Basing his theme on the life of Moses, the Rev. E. H. DeGroot, jr., told his audience at Wisconsin Avenue Baptist Church that "we must do the best we can with what we have."

He pointed out that "Moses had made a mess of things. His first 40 years, with all of his advantage of environment and education may be summed up in one homicide and flight for life . . . But God had work for him, and he was shaken out of his lethargy."

Relief in Washington

Need Far Exceeds Aid Available

Scores of Families Must Wait Until Others Are Dropped From Welfare Rolls

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A letter has come to The Post from the mother of six children in a family where the father is ill and which has been on relief for many months. It said, in part:

"September is here. Houses will will be cold. How are we to care for our family this winter on $40 per month? How can a mother bring up decent citizens under these circumstances? It's fight for every crumb of bread . . . I can't sleep at night. Every day it's Where am I going to get dinner from? My rent is due and the electricity will be shut off September 6. I haven't got it."

The Board of Public Welfare was asked for an answer to the question: What will happen when winter comes? It revealed figures on needs far in excess of available resources.

Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare, repeated a statement he made last spring in an address before the League of Women Voters. "General relief in the District of Columbia is not based on human need."

Records Show Privation

Figures, cold as they are, make this plain. A visit to the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare, conversation with case workers and a glance at the records of even a few of the families translate relief problems back into the lives of men, women and children. There is no war situation to dramatize their needs but there exists privation, suffering, distress and want.

July 1, there were 2,131 unemployables receiving relief in the District. Just a year ago, there were only 1,555. In addition to those cases receiving relief, there were on July 1, 150 families for whom investigation had been completed and urgent need certified, but who could not be added to the rolls except as replacements for those dropped during the month.

"Relief expenditures during the current year are kept within the appropriation only by exercise of arbitrary restrictions which have no sound relation to the needs of persons affected," Bondy stated.

In order to keep within the 1941 appropriation, a 12 per cent cut was made in July and August relief allowances and no families were added to the rolls except to replace those for whom relief was discontinued.

Reductions Necessary

This means that many families which already had been receiving allowances sadly below their minimum budget needs, were further reduced.

The discrepancy between the budget needs of a family and its allowance is due to the "ceiling," the provision in the law that no family shall receive more than $60 per month. This makes it impossible to give adequate aid to a family of eight unless there is some other source of income. It also removes from the discretion of the case worker, the decision as to the extent of assistance needed.

Supplementary aid is provided through surplus commodities orders, given to persons on the active relief list whose allowance does not meet budget needs, and also to persons employed under WPA with a budget deficiency. Commodities available during the past month have been lard, prunes, eggs, corn meal, cereal, dry skim milk, potatoes, salt pork, beets, flour and tomatoes. A family of two would receive an order for these amounting to approximately $2.13, if bought at retail. A family of 11 would receive an order valued at about $7.98. Not as many items are available every month.

In addition, during the winter, an allowance of half a cord of wood a month is given to those in need of fuel. This is provided by the WPA with hauling the only cost to the District.

Capital News in Brief

Here Is Confucian Worse Confounded

Loy Lee, 40, smelled gas yesterday in his laundry at 502 Minnesota avenue northeast. He trailed the odor to a vent outside the building and bent over to investigate more closely.

Unfortunately, Loy held a lighted cigarette in his mouth. The burst of flame which enveloped Loy was noticed by a bus inspector, Earle Delauder, of 527 Second street southeast, who snatched a fire extinguisher from a filling station across the street and extinguished the blaze before it damaged Loy or his laundry.

"Man who smell gas," remarked Loy, "need ash tray."

Opening of Washington's oyster season will undergo formal ceremonies tomorrow when Howard W. Beach, president of the Oyster Growers Association, arrives in Washington by plane and presents a batch of the seafood to Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt, head White House housekeeper.

Real Estate Men To Meet Again

Real estate dealers and builders of Alexandria and Washington will hold a second joint meeting this week in an effort to reach some solution to the present problem of low-cost housing in Alexandria. The fact that there is a shortage of suitable dwellings for mechanics at the naval torpedo plant in Alexandria was largely responsible for the meeting.

A survey of the situation was presented at the first meeting by Commander R. W. Hayler, officer in charge at the torpedo station. Commander Hayler said 549 men were employed at the plant at the present time and that this number is expected to be increased by 300 or 400 by January.

"Christians must learn to keep a cool head in these days of turmoil to keep from loosing their souls," Dr. Frederick Stamm, of Brooklyn, N. Y., said at tonight's worship service. The "economic pressure" of the past decade and a "mechanistic view" of life are making it difficult for people to keep their souls, he said.

Philatelic Convention Attacks 'Gift Stamps' as 'Unethical'

Adopts Resolution of D. C. Man Deerying Practice; Move Follows Senate Fight Over Charges Ickes Got Special Issue

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 31.—The Society of Philatelic Americans at its convention session here today condemned the "practice of giving away" stamps as special favors on the part of Postoffice Department officials.

The denunciatory resolution was brought before the assembly on the motion of Frederick R. Rice, of the Washington Collectors Club No. 5. The move followed a Senate squabble initiated last week by Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, who charged that Secretary of Ickes had obtained 200 imperforate gummed stamps issued in commemoration of the National Park Service.

These stamps, Danaher asserted, were worth $187,500 and he called for a Senate investigation to determine where "certain persons by virtue of official position or otherwise" had received special privileges in acquiring postage stamps.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, defending Secretary Ickes, offered the issue to Danaher for the face value cost of $82.50.

Ickes himself said that he had never sold any of the stamps, nor had he offered them for sale. He admitted giving some away to friends, and that he gave some of these to New York University to be sold at auction for the benefit of refugees.

This practice of gift stamps, the philatelist convention branded as "unethical." The organization plans to petition the Postoffice to issue no stamps which are not available to the general public at the regular designated places of sale.

The J. Edward Vining Trophy, grand award, was won by L. H. Baekhausen, of Chicago, for his United States envelopes, 1853-1865. The 1941 convention will be held in Philadelphia.

Hotel Guest Bound, Robbed By 3 Youths

Watch, $5 Taken From New Yorker In Lafayette Park

Two persons were victims of strong-arm robberies, another was flim-flammed, and burglars ransacked the cash register of a liquor store in week-end crimes, police reported last night.

Bound and gagged with his own neckties by three white youths who entered his hotel room at 916 Sixteenth street northwest early yesterday, Denard Engram reported to police that he had been robbed of his wallet containing $17.25, a portable typewriter and several shirts.

Police believed the same youths a few hours earlier "yoked" and robbed John Kulina, 34, of New York, as he walked through Lafayette Park. Kulina was relieved of his wallet containing $5, and his wrist watch valued at $50, he told police.

Burglars broke into a liquor store at 2263 Mt. View place southeast. Ralph J. Beall, 2313 Nichols avenue southeast, owner of the store, told police nearly $50 in change had been taken from the cash register. Two revolvers also were stolen.

Thieves were unsuccessful in their attempt to crack open a 600-pound safe. Beall said the safe contained $2,000.

A chance meeting with a stranger in the Greyhound bus terminal at Twelfth street and New York avenue northwest cost William Stout, of Fisherville, Va., $70 in travelers' checks. The stranger introduced a friend who suggested matching pennies to pass away the time. The game progressed to higher stakes and Stout wound up minus his checks.

Snead and Nelson Reach Finals of P. G. A. Play

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Sept. 1.—Jimmy Johnston, a disinterested party save for the fact that he manages Bob Pastor, not only predicts a victory for his man over Bill Conn next Friday evening, but is ready with all of the details of how it will happen.

POVICH

"Body punching—that's how Pastor will win it," Johnston was orating today at Stillman's gymnasium where his man was punching the big bag for the benefit of New York's fight press. "You're going to see the lost art of body banging restored at the Garden Friday night. Conn will want out of there when Pastor starts punching to the body with both hands. We won't fool around with Conn's chin."

That last is also Conn's idea. The fancy-boxing Pittsburgh lad never lets anybody fool around with his chin. That's how he got to be the light heavyweight champion. That's why, also, he thinks he can outbox any of the second-rate heavyweights and precipitate a profitable match for himself with Joe Louis.

Conn needs a match with Joe Louis, or with anybody else who can attract a sizable gate. The fast-living Pittsburgh boy is flat busted, according to reports on Forty-ninth street, and he is, moreover, in pawn to Promoter Mike Jacobs for $12,000 in advance monies loaned him.

There is no particular call for a Conn-Pastor match, but Jacobs somehow has got to get his money out of Conn. Jacobs admitted he was a rank visionary when he scheduled the Conn-Pastor show in August as an outdoor extravaganza. When the fight public didn't see it in that light, and showed great disinterest, Jacobs seized upon a light mist as an excuse and called it off as an outdoor show, moving it into the Garden where it belongs.

Conn is supposed to be a 9-to-5 favorite to beat Pastor, but the reasons are not quite clear. At 180 pounds, if he can weigh that much, Conn is just a bloated middleweight who is taking on weight at the sacrifice of the speed that is his forte. Pastor is a legitimate 180-pounder who has stood up on his feet for 27 rounds in two bouts with Joe Louis.

Nothing Conn has ever achieved against the middleweights and lightheavies he has fought can compare to Pastor's records as a heavyweight. After being floored in the early rounds by Louis, Pastor got up out of the resin and gave the champion ten merry rounds of it before he took a conclusive count. Pastor has never been rated a puncher, but he hits harder than the fellows Conn has been fighting. "We'll make him sick with body punches," Johnston was saying. "These fancy Dans can duck with their chins, but they can't duck with their stomachs. Gene Tunney was the last great body puncher, and he did alright. Pastor isn't a great one, but he's good enough.

Harry Greb was a pretty fancy boxer, but in five bouts with Gene he could only beat him once. Tunney wasn't a top fighter in those days, but Greb told me he didn't want any more of Gene. Tunney's stiff right hand to the heart, the punch that beat Dempsey both at Philadelphia and Chicago was no fun for Greb. Harry could duck with his chin but not with his stomach."

Another fellow who did all right with body punches was Bob Fitzsimmons, originator of the solar plexus punch which was nothing more than a stiff jolt beneath the ribs. Johnston remembered Fitzsimmons as he built up a case for Pastor's new body-punching technique.

"Jim Corbett was the speed boy of the fight business in that era," explained Johnston. "You wouldn't compare Conn with Corbett would you? Well, what happened when Fitz climbed in there against Corbett? I'll remind you. Corbett went out like a light from one good body punch." Johnston professed not to hear when somebody asked him if he considered his man Pastor as another Fitzsimmons.

In another part of the gymnasium, old Paul Berlenbach was watching Pastor shoot for the body against a sparmate and nodded his head approvingly. "You can always slow down these boys with body belts," agreed Berlenbach whose own body punching carried him into the light-heavyweight title against such fast boys as the late Young Stribling and Jimmy Slattery.

Berlenbach made haste to add that he didn't think Pastor would like Conn, however. "Conn will be in shape to take plenty to the body. He always is. He has a pretty clever way of protecting himself with his elbows. Pastor will be hitting a lot of elbows in there Friday night. Anyway, you have to catch up with a guy before you can belt him in the body. That was my trouble. There were some fellows I could never catch."

HESITATION NOTE—In the Yankee dugout on Saturday, the New York players were anxiously awaiting the final result of the Cleveland-Chicago game. Eight innings of the game had been posted on the scoreboard and a Yankee outfielder expressed some worry that the Indians may have won out in the ninth.

"They put that eighth inning on the scoreboard 20 minutes ago," he said. "A lot must be happening in the ninth."

"Aw, cut the worry," cracked a Yankee pitcher. "That 20-minute delay doesn't mean anything. It's probably just Vitt trying to make up his mind about something."

Nats Beaten, 3-2 and 3-0, By Yankees

Walter Masterson, Leonard Victims; Ruffing and Bonham Hold Nats Helpless

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, Sept. 1.—The Nats played the Yankees a double-header today, but there is no startling news, such as a Washington victory, to report. The Nats, who haven't won a game all year in Yankee Stadium, went into mass production today and stepped up their losing streak to six straight.

The scores of this afternoon's little tableaux were 3 to 2 and 3 to 0, which offers a gentle hint of how the Nats were pounding that ball.

Now steam-rollering toward the pennant, the Yankees extended their current winning streak to 7 straight and moved to within 4½ games of the league-leading Indians. Their double win today hoisted the Yanks to within one game of the second-place Tigers, who were dropping a decision to the Browns. The Yanks have now won 20 out of their last 23 starts.

Rain Delays Play

Rain, which delayed the start of the first game for an hour, threatened to wash out the second game three times in the early innings, the umpires halting play while the ground crew shuttled on and off the field with the tarpaulins. Box-seat fans moved back to the covered grandstands and the crowd of 15,062 demanded that the game be resumed.

The first game was a cruel defeat for Dutch Leonard, who held the Yankees to seven hits in a duel with Red Ruffing, but saw the winning run score in the third inning when one of his knuckle balls boomeranged in the form of a wild pitch. A first-inning homer by Red Rolfe with Joe Gordon on base didn't help Leonard any, either. The Nats outhit the Yanks, 8 to 7.

There wasn't much the Nats could do about their second-game defeat. Ernie Bonham, the big right-handed rookie from Kansas City, held them to four hits and permitted only one man to reach third base.

Masterson Allows 7 Hits

Walter Masterson was the leading pitcher in the second game. With his mother and dad sitting in the stands, young Masterson pitched a clever game, holding the Yanks to seven hits before he was relieved in the eighth inning. He was in a scoreless duel with Bonham until a luck-anointed Yankee hit paved the way for a New York run in the sixth.

The Yankees jolted Leonard for two runs in the opener almost before he was warmed up. Gordon greeted him in the first inning with a single to left, and his next pitch was knocked into the rightfield stands by Rolfe.

The Yanks' third run stemmed from a single by Keller and a pass Leonard issued to Dickey with none out in the third inning. Dahlgren sacrificed the runners along, and with Crosetti at bat, one of Leon-

Breaks Are Decisive; McSpaden Routed, 5-4 By Slammin' Sam After Postponement

By Henry Super
United Press Sports Writer.

Hershey, Pa., Sept. 1.—The men who were second best in the last two P. G. A. championships—Slammin' Sammy Snead and Byron Nelson—today reached the finals of the 1940 tournament.

Snead, defeated by Paul Runyan, 8 and 7, in 1938, got another chance at his first major golf championship by beating Harold (Jug) McSpaden, 5 and 4, in the second chapter of their match, which was interrupted yesterday at the halfway mark by rain.

Nelson, loser to Henry Picard on the thirty-seventh hole of last year's championship, defeated husky Ralph Guldahl, one up in 36 holes, to hold the lead he had when the match was halted yesterday.

Sun Reappears

The boys played under a broiling sun on the 7,017-yard course of Hershey Country Club after being drenched by rain since the tournament started last Monday.

Snead marched to the first tee three holes ahead of McSpaden and never had any trouble winning. Nelson had a one-hole lead starting out, increased it to three holes at today's fourth hole, and then fought off a game rally by Big Ralph as they neared the home green.

Snead, famous for his collapses under pressure in major tournaments, for once stayed out in front today as he gave McSpaden the worst licking he ever has suffered in a P. G. A. tournament.

He cracked out a conceded birdie on the second hole to go four up when Jug gambled and lost. McSpaden had a bad lie with his drive and tried to slice a number four wood over some trees and a nearby creek to the pin. He lunged into the shot too soon and sliced it into the water. He took four strokes to get on the green while Sam was home in two. Jug missed his putt for a five and conceded Snead a birdie three.

After that, they matched par after par as Snead rounded the turn four up in 33, one under par, against Jug's 38. McSpaden was having trouble with his putts and couldn't get them down.

On the home trip they matched two pars and fired birdies on the twelfth. Jug was running out of holes and the break came on the thirteenth, green when Snead curled in a 10-foot putt around a partial stymie to score a birdie and go five up. They halved the short, par-three fourteenth hole and that was the end of the match.

Breaks Decide

Nelson, Open champion last year, had a tough fight before defeating Guldahl, winner of the Open titles in 1937 and 1938. Breaks told the story. Nelson went two up on the second hole with a par four when big Ralph trapped his second shot and came out weak. On the fourth

Pirates Blank Cards, 10 to 0; Tie in Second

12-Inning Nightcap Ends in 5-5 Deadlock, To Be Protested

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 1.—After doling out a 10 to 0 shutout in the first game today, the Pittsburgh Pirates batled the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-5 tie in 11 innings of the nightcap which the Bucs played under protest because of a changed decision by Umpire George Magerkurth.

Fiery Frankie Frisch was chased from the second show by Magerkurth after the Buc manager protested the arbitrator's decision in calling Jim Brown out, then safe at first in the seventh inning. Frisch immediately announced the second contest, called because of the Sunday time limit, would be finished under protest.

Ken Heintzelman turned in his best performance this season, holding the Redbirds to four hits in the first game and accounting for four of the Pirates' hits.

The Bucs gathered eight of their ten markers in a big fourth inning, sending 13 men to the plate and being aided by two Cards errors.

In the second game, the visitors scored all their runs on homers. John Mize knocked in three in the first inning and Terry Moore drove in two in the wild seventh.

Jim Brown's bounder was stopped by Elbie Fletcher who tossed to Johnny Lanning. Magerkurth called Brown out, then reversed himself. During the ensuing argument Brown

Dodgers Drub Giants In Twin Bill, 4-1, 7-3

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 1.—Brooklyn today practically eliminated the Giants as a threat to its second place position in the National League by taking their intra-city rivals in a doubleheader, 4 to 1 and 7 to 3.

In the opener Lee Grissom checked the New Yorkers with five scattered safeties. The Dodgers, meanwhile, cuffed loser Hal Schumacher for eight hits, all of these coming in the first five heats in which the Flatbushers did all their scoring. Schumacher drove in the Giants' only marker with a triple in the fifth.

A four-run rally in the sixth iced the second contest for Brooklyn. Whitlow Wyatt went the distance, allowing seven hits but keeping them well scattered. Cliff Melton started for the Giants and was charged with the loss. Jim Lynn and Walt Brown succeeded him. Brooklyn pounded all three hurlers for a total of 15 hits.

Niggeling Hurls 4-Hit Victory Over Tigers, 8-2

By International News Service

St. Louis, Sept. 1.—Johnny Niggeling, aging St. Louis Knuckle Ball artist, pitched a four-hit, 8-to-2 victory over Detroit today to sink the Tigers 3½ games behind the league-leading Cleveland Indians.

Niggeling, hurling his sixth win of the season to give the Browns an even break in the two-game series, was in trouble only in the seventh frame, when George Tebbetts drove in Charley Gehringer and Pinky Higgins with a double.

Meanwhile the Browns tagged Johnny Corsica, Archie McKain and Harold Newhouser for 12 safeties, including Harlond Clift's homer in the second with one on. Corsica gave up nine hits and five runs, and the Browns collected three hits and as many runs off McKain in the seventh.

The victory ended a five-game losing streak for the Browns. A crowd of 5,763 attended.

Indians Blast Lyons, Defeat White Sox, 7-4

Tribe Collects 12 Hits Off Veteran; Dobson's Brilliant Relief Hurling Saves Game for Cleveland; Miller Routed

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 1.—The league-leading Cleveland Indians hopped on their favorite "cousins," the Chicago White Sox, today for a third straight victory, 7 to 4, combing the veteran Ted Lyons for 12 hits, including 5 doubles and 2 triples.

The victory was Cleveland's fifteenth in 19 games with the Sox.

Joe Dobson's brilliant relief pitching and a three-run ninth-inning rally were mainly responsible for the defeat of the Sox. Chicago knocked Starting Pitcher Al Milnar out of the box with a three-run splurge in the third inning, giving them a 4-to-1 lead. Dobson succeeded Milnar and held the Sox scoreless and yielded one hit until the last inning, when he was relieved for a pinch runner.

The Indians got two runs on Hal Trosky's double, Jeff Heath's triple and Frankie Pytlak's single in the fourth. The Sox held onto their one-run lead until the eighth, when Lyons Boudreau scratched a single and went all the way to third on Lyons' wild pitch. Trosky and Heath failed to bring him in, but Ken Keltner delivered with another infield single to tie the score.

Pytlak opened the ninth by drawing a walk. Dobson forced him at second and Ben Chapman followed with a double, Dobson stopping at third. At this juncture, Oscar Grimes went in to run for Dobson. Grimes scored on Roy Weatherly's double against the rightfield wall, Taft Wright almost catching the ball. Boudreau then sewed up the game, scoring Chapman and Weatherly with a single.

Bob by Feller took the mound for the last of the ninth. Mike Tresh flied out, Bob Kennedy walked and Ken Silvestri, batting for Lyons, struck out, Pytlak doubling Kennedy at second.

Brewers Beat St. Elizabeths Nine, 6 to 5

By Bill Burnett

The "old men" of local sandlot baseball, the Heurich Brewers of The Washington Post Industrial League, proved the value of experience and playing the breaks again yesterday.

They won the opening game of the D. C. championship tournament, 6-5, from the St. Elizabeth's nine, of the U. S. Militia League. They went 12 innings to do it, and accomplished the feat despite the fact they were outhit, 10-7.

More than 5,000 fans, sensing a thrilling battle, ignored every other clash on the Ellipse to see the two league champions clash. And they weren't disappointed. Numerous arguments developed, and St. Eliz-

Dodgers Rout Rams, 20 to 0, In Exhibition

By the Associated Press

Stratford, Conn., Sept. 1.—Jock Sutherland made his bow as coach of a professional football team today and watched his Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League whip the Stratford Rams, 20 to 0. It was the season's first exhibition for the Dodgers, whose performance lacked polish but showed plenty of power.

A circus catch by Roten Shetley, freshman back from Furman University, brought the first score. He snared a pass from Sam Francis in the second period. The play covered 20 yards. Center Joe Ratica intercepted a pass on the first play of the fourth period and ran 34 yards for a second touchdown. The third also was scored through the air as the Dodgers gained 35 yards on passes from Bill Leckonby to Waddie Young and from Francis to Perry Schwartz. Ralph Kercheval and Bruiser Kinard place-kicked the extra points.

The Rams, led by Player-Coach Tubby Savage, formerly of Manhattan, failed even to make a first down.

Mrs. Betty Meckley Tops Mason-Dixon Practice With 80

Miss Guilfoil, of Syracuse, N. Y., was the titlist in 1937 and again in 1939.

Women's par for the course is 79.

Game Called in Eighth, Teams Run Out of Balls

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 1 (AP).—The last Cotton States League game of the season here had to be called at the end of the eighth inning last night with Pine Bluff leading Hot Springs, 20 to 10, when the teams ran out of baseballs.

The teams banged three dozen balls out of the park via the foul route plus three home runs. There were a total of 39 hits recorded, 16 of them doubles and one a triple, in as wild and wooly a game as fans here have ever seen.

Millner Hurt, to Miss Redskin-Packer Exhibition Today

Farkas Rests Easily After Knee Surgery

Star Fullback Lost Until November; Green Bay Favored At 3-1 to Win Today

By Al Hailey
A Staff Correspondent

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 1.—While Andy Farkas was undergoing an operation this morning that will keep him out of action for ten weeks, another bit of misfortune befell the Redskins when Wayne Millner, veteran end, received a badly wrenched back in practice.

The former Notre Dame All-American was injured when he fell on a free ball and will be out of the line-up when the Redskins face the world champion Green Bay Packers here tomorrow afternoon in a exhibition game.

With these two stars out of the line-up tomorrow, the Redskins' running and passing attack both will suffer severely. Millner caught one touchdown pass and two others that were instrumental in touchdowns in Spokane, while Farkas scored twice and reeled off considerable yardage before injured.

Green Bay Favored

As a result, the Packers were established 3-1 favorites to beat the lads from District of Columbia. A throng of 25,000 is expected to fill State Fair Park by the kickoff at 2:15 p. m., 3:15 in Washington.

Meanwhile, at the hospital, physicians who removed a piece of damaged cartilege from Farkas' right knee announced the operation a success but said it would be late in November before Andy will be ready to gallop again.

The fullback running star, who last year set a league record for touchdowns, was resting comfortably, his wife, who flew here from Detroit, said. It was in a hospital in Detroit that Mrs. Farkas, a former trained nurse, met Andy.

Farkas Won't See Game

Farkas will be unable to leave his bed when the Redskins try to break up the passing combination of the Packers' Cecil Isbell to Don Hutson, but he will have a radio at hand.

Flaherty lightly passes off the Packers' running game, which gained 61 yards against the College All-Stars in Chicago, but the 315 yards the Packers gained by passing is causing him plenty of pain.

The Redskin starting backfield will consist of Sammy Baugh, quarter, Ed Justice and Ernie Pinckert, halfbacks, and Maxie Krause, fullback. Pinckert, who left the squad in Spokane to attend his mother's funeral in Los Angeles, is to arrive here tonight by plane.

Two to Cover Hutson

Dick Todd and Wilbur Moore will share the responsibility of covering Don Hutson when the Packer end enters the game. Flaherty believes these two men are the only men on the team who can cover the Bay State pass-catching star.

The Redskins are going to do a lot of passing and are hoping to unveil a trio of new running plays, reverses in which Moore is the main cog. Moore got away for 71 yards on one of the new reverses in Spokane.

In addition to being a test as to what the Redskin fans can expect this season, tomorrow's exhibition will give the rookies another chance to prove themselves.

Roy Zimmerman, triple-threat man from San Jose State, already has won his wings, but Bob Seymour, fullback from Oklahoma, and Ray Hare, blocking back from Gonzaga, have been not too impressive in actual games. Bob Hoffman, the 200-pound blocking back from Southern California, played six minutes with the All-Stars against Green Bay Wednesday night and will play with the Skins for the first time. Another cut in the squad now consisting of 5 more men than the player limit of 33, will be made after the game.

Tiger Rookie To Report Today

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 1 (AP).—George Schepps, president of the Dallas club of the Texas League, said Pitcher Bob Uhle would leave tomorrow for Detroit to be on hand for the Tigers' series with Cleveland.

Jack Zeller, vice president of the Tigers, told Schepps by telephone that he wants to use Uhle against Cleveland as he feels southpaw hurling won't agree with the American League leaders.

Uhle was sold to Detroit for a reported $10,000 and a player acceptable to the Dallas club, or an additional $5,000.

Bill Pendergast Fails To Qualify at Capital

Martino Wins Club Championship Medal; Mrs. Feeney, Peacock Take Indian Spring Championship; McCreery Is Manor Leader

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Capital Club members couldn't touch Pat Martino's 146 score as the 36-hole club championship qualifying tests were concluded yesterday with Martino's total good by a six-stroke margin. Billy Houghton was second with 152.

Among the non-qualifiers were Bill Pendergast, a many-time champion, George Borsari and Roy K. Aten, all who figured to be well in the championship flight. Scores of 166 or better, or an average of 83 strokes a round, qualified safely.

Martino posted his rounds of 76-70 last week-end and his position as medalist was never endangered. Houghton needed a 73 to tie, but finished with 79 for 152, while the next lowest scorer was Henry Cohen, 11 strokes back with 157. Buster Mrstik and S. S. Fletcher trailed with 80-79—159.

Pro Tony Sylvester will make pairings for the six flights of 16 players each early this week in preparation for the first round of match play next Sunday. Frank White, defending champion, was an automatic qualifier.

Indian Spring members will compete in a Blind Bogey event today.

J. R. Meyer is only one shot back with 80-11, 69, while three are tied with net 70's and within striking distance for the final round: H. S. Farrell, 86-16, 70; Edwin Teague, 84-14, 70; and Don Walker, 81-11, 70.

Today's holiday program at the club includes, in addition to the President's Cup finals, a Tombstone tournament for the ladies, a driving contest for the men and a continuation of the two-man team championship.

WOODMONT

Simon Eichberg and H. E. Strasser each finished three down to old man par but led the field in the Match Play Against Par tournament yesterday at Woodmont. Ed Melniker finished second, five down, while Sam Samuels, Al Small and Al Goldstein were all six down.

Harry Rubin topped Class B, six down, with Maury Young runner-up, ten down.

Rochelle's 75 was the lowest gross score and O'Brien's 69 the lowest net.

CONGRESSIONAL

H. J. Klossner's 84-16, 68, is the leading score in the House Committee trophy play at Congressional, with the day's play remaining.

hole. Byron went three up as Guldahl three-putted from the edge of the green. Ralph bagged a birdie on the sixth to be only two down and that's how they stood as they rounded the turn—Nelson in 35 and Guldahl in 36.

Big Ralph, playing slower and slower on each hole, birdied the tenth to be one down but went two down again when Nelson birdied the eleventh. Up and down it went, with Guldahl winning the fourteenth to be one down and going two down again on the fifteenth. Then came a break that almost sent Nelson to the sidelines. On the sixteenth, Byron shanked his second shot and needed a five against Ralph's four. Big Ralph Really was rolling and on the seventeenth he stuck his approach shot 6 feet from the pin for what looked like a cinch birdie. That would have squared the match. Nelson was 10 feet away and missed his putt by a few inches. Ralph studied his—an easy one—for a few minutes. He missed it by a whisker. The eighteenth hole was halved to end the match. Nelson finished with a 36-71 and Guldahl a 35-71.

Chase, Hudson Face Red Sox Today In Double-Header

At the expense of the Boston Red Sox the Nats will attempt to break their losing streak today as they move back to Griffith Stadium for a Labor Day double-header starting at 1:30 p. m.

Manager Bucky Harris has Ken Chase and Sid Hudson ready to throw at the White Sox.

Indications by Manager Joe Cronin are that Lefty Grove will pitch one of the games for the Red Sox. The veteran southpaw has been idle for three weeks with an injured foot, but was scheduled to pitch yesterday against the A's before rain washed out the game. Freddy Ostermueller, also left-handed, is expected to pitch the second game.

ARGYLE

Two down and three to play, R. J. Posson won two of the next three holes to square the Argyle Senior championship finals against Fritz Manning and then went on to win on the twenty-first hole.

Manning won the sixteenth and eighteenth with pars, they halved the first two extra holes in regulation figures and Posson won the twenty-first with a par five to Manning's six.

Today is positively the last day for club championship qualifications. Scores of 79 and better are expected to make the championship flight. The other brackets will be played on a handicap basis.

Bees Sweep Double-Header From Phillies

Tobin and Salvo Hurl Six-Hit Games In 2-1, 10-0 Victories

By International News Service

Boston, Sept. 1.—A pair of six-hit pitching performances today enabled the Boston Bees to sweep both ends of a twin bill from the Philadelphia Phillies, 2 to 1, and 10 to 0.

Jim Tobin chalked up his fourth win of the campaign in the opener as he outbested Hugh Mulcahey in a pitchers' duel. A double by Johnny Conney, a single by "Bama" Rowell and a long fly by Max West produced the run that proved to be the margin of victory. Ben Warren and Chet Ross accounted for the other tallies via the home run route.

In the nightcap, Manny Salvo had little trouble in annexing h's ninth victory as his teammates went on a batting spree. A base-clearing double by Chet Ross gave the Bees the impetus to batter two Phillie pitchers for 13 hits.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 1.—Fellows, I've got some disquieting news. Female cleats without an effective locking device are prohibited this year. And if you don't think that's serious you'd better read the 1940 football rules, just released in the official football guide.

CONSIDINE

The ban on slipshod female cleats heads a list of five changes in the regulations of college football. And in case you think a female cleat has something to do with the co-ed halfback that American University was supposed to have a couple of years ago, you're wrong. We can't safely describe a female cleat, except to say that it's a kind of snaggletoothed prong protruding from the sole of a football shoe and that it probably feels just as bad when its ground into a guy's eye as does a male cleat.

Changing the football rules is a serious business, calling for secret board-room meetings by the sober-sides of the grid game. Sometimes you hear a hoarse voice cry out from behind those closed doors, as the weighty minds of the business battle over how much yardage to penalize a clipper during the coming season. We can imagine that the new militant stand on female cleats must have emerged from an awesome schism.

We can see W. J. Bingham, of Harvard, representative of conservative New England on the rules committee, getting to his feet at the start of the last meeting and saying, with nice back restraint, "Gentlemen, you know why we are here. The female cleat has gotten completely out of hand and unless we step in with stern measure the very foundations of the game will be shaken."

There must have been a mumble of approval and reflected righteousness from Dana X. Bible, representing Texas and the Southwestern States, and from Fielding H. Yost, representing the Midwest. Cries of "female cleats with ineffective locking devices must go!" must have filled the room.

Perhaps the defenseless female cleat, now at the mercy of the vigilantes, found a champion. We rather think it would have been courtly old Bill Alexander, of Georgia Tech, who was representing the South-Eastern States. "Gentlemen," we can hear old Bill drawl, "ah resents the way that female cleat's name has been bandied about heah. If you all will pardon me ah'll leave this disparaging rules bo'd. The old South isn't dead, yet, suhs."

Anyway, that's how college football stands on the female cleat this season. Other changes: The points of conical cleats have been made sharper; a team loses a down if one of its ineligible pass receivers is hit by a ball behind the line of scrimmage; the game officials can now decide whether a kicked free ball was booted accidentally or with malice aforethought; kickers are no longer entitled to protection from mauling opponents if it is not obvious that they are going to kick.

Cincinnati Captures Pair From Chicago

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 1.—A one-run margin in both games of a double-header with Chicago gave the league-leading Cincinnati Reds their thirteenth twin triumph of the year today as they defeated the Bruins, 6 to 5 and 2 to 1.

The first game was a batters' battle, with the Cubs coming up short in the last round after staging a four-run rally in the eighth inning. The nightcap was a hurling duel in which Lloyd (Whitey) Moore bested Larry French.

The Rhinelanders scored two runs in the third inning of the opening on a series of singles and a pass off Bill Lee. The Cubs jumped on Hurler Jim Turner in the fifth, counting a run on Robert Collins' single and Bob Mattick's double.

Lee Chased

In their half of the fifth, the Reds drove Lee out of the box as the entire side went to bat, scoring four runs on three hits, a hit batsman, two bases on balls and two stolen bases, one of them a double steal executed by Jimmy Riple and Ival Goodman.

Clay Bryant sparked the Cubs to their four-run splurge in the eighth with a safety. Stanley Hack and Billy Herman singled Bryant home and Zeke Bohura doubled them over the plate. Dominic D'Allessandro singled to score Bonura.

Moore Halts Cubs

In the nightcap, Moore held the Cubs to four hits in 7 2-3 innings. Stanley Hack counted the Bruins' only marker with his third home run of the year in the seventh.

Moore was relieved by Joe Beggs after he issued three passes in the eighth. Frank McCormick singled home a run in the first inning and Mike McCormick hit safely in the sixth to count the other off French.

Timonium Opens Last Stand of Half-Mile Season Today

Bets Topped Million Mark At Marlboro

Track Had Average Daily of $113,000; Steeplechasing Back On Programs Today

By Walter Haight

It's the last go-round for Maryland's merry-go-rounds, the half-mile tracks, at Timonium starting today. However, when the last spin ends next week, the little plants can look back on some big business, in fact, the best season they have ever enjoyed.

Time was when the half-milers picked up a few crumbs of the sport that sifted through from their big cousins, the mile ovals. But this season, with better horses, better betting facilities and some improvements at several points, the small tracks have piled up records for both attendance and betting. And don't think for a minute that one of the chief reasons isn't the growth of the Washington pay roll in the last six months.

Marlboro Set Record

Marlboro had a remarkable meeting. The Prince Georges Track, with a grandstand so small that it looked like a hamburger stand when the cars get around it, had better than a million dollar betting total for those ten days. In fact, more than $300,000 above a million. That's an average of $130,000 a day and, if memory serves, I can remember when $50,000 a day was considered a signal for the owners to join hands and sing, "We're in the Money."

What is more, Marlboro turned the trick with a week of bad weather and with only three days of fast track. Saturday's crowd was held down, too, by heavy rains in Washington and Baltimore at the time most fans were leaving, or would have been leaving, for the track.

Charles Town, Hagerstown, Bel Air, Cumberland and Marlboro all piled up new marks. There is every reason to believe that Timonium will do as well. Interest has never sagged in racing this summer and it is likely that the enthusiasm will carry right over into the big time that begins at Havre de Grace on September 14.

Fair at Timonium

Racing at Timonium will be conducted along with Maryland's biggest fair. If you tire of seeing the horses do their stuff, you can visit almost every kind of exhibition. In addition, there's a midway—stands, shows, Ferris wheel and everything—right up against the track.

Steeplchasing returns as part of the program at this track. A limit field has been named for today's jumping event with War Port, the probable favorite. Seven flat races are on the card, with the fifth event, the feature. Post time is 2 p. m. The double is on the first and second races.

Gains Momemtum in Saddle

Jockey Willie Kelly, who began the small track Summer Season hereabouts in rather dull fashion, stuck his best riding stride with the opening of the Cumberland meeting and went on to win the gold wrist watch offered for the leading jockey at that track. He carried over his good form at the Marlboro meeting which closed last Saturday and promises to be prominent at Timonium which opens today for a ten-day session. Kelly, who is light but strong, gives first call on his services to Trainer George A. Cook, of Washington.

U. S. Randle String Threatens To Retire Rosenstell Trophy

D. C. Sportsman to Have Six Contenders in Corinthian Class of Columbus Horse Show

The Rosensteel Challenge Trophy, beautiful memorial to the late Rev. Charles O. Rosensteel, is in danger of being retired from competition this week-end in the fifth annual Columbus Horse Show Saturday and Sunday at Meadowbrook Saddle Club, Chevy Chase.

Into the hands of the show committee has been placed the entries of half a dozen hunters from the powerful string of U. S. Randle 3d, Washington sportsman and real estate operator, and all will be sent into the Corinthian class in hopes of lifting the Rosensteel Trophy.

Randle already has two legs on the award and a triumph by any member of his stable will give him permanent possession of the prized cup. Claws won the trophy for the Washingtonian in 1937, while Sport Marvel gave him the second leg a year later.

The only other exhibitor whose name is borne on the silver award, John W. Beach, whose Wahmbe won it in 1939, is not showing here this year.

The late Rev. Father Rosensteel, who was chapisin of the Forest Glen Council, Knights of Columbus, which is the sponsor of the Columbus Horse Show, presented the trophy to the show committee in 1937.

It was decided to make it a challenge trophy to be competed for in the Corinthian class until one owner has won it three times. With the death of Father Rosensteel the trophy was converted into a memorial award.

The Corinthian class is open only to members of recognized fox hunts and must be ridden in full hunting attire with performance of the mount, manners, way of going, conformation, quality, substance and soundness, together with the appointments of horse and rider, to be considered by the judges.

The Corinthian class is scheduled Sunday afternoon, the last event before the award of hunter and jumper championships, which will bring the show to a close.

The program on Saturday is to begin at 9 a. m., with a full day's card offered each day. Only brief intermissions will be taken for lunch.

2 Stake Races On Aqueduct Opening Card

Aqueduct Handicap, Woodmere Stakes Are Co-Featured

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 1.—After the usual August campaign at Saratoga, racing returns to the metropolitan area tomorrow as Aqueduct opens its fall meeting with a program headed by two stakes.

Seven horses are entered for the $7,500-Added Aqueduct Handicap mile and a sixteenth for 3-year-olds and up. Likely favorites are Arnold Hanger's Max Hirsch—trained pair of He Did, one of the most improved handicap horses in training this year, and the 3-year-old Roman Flag. He Did has been assigned top-weight of 123 pounds. Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons' 3-year-old entry of Fenelon and Asp figure to provide the stiffest opposition.

The cofeature is the Woodmere Stakes, seven furlongs, with H. R. Bain's Stoney Brush carrying top weight of 117 pounds. Mrs. Payne Whitney's entry of Red Dock and Armor Bearer, P. B. Codd's pair of Knickerbocker and Gino Rex, Mrs. G. C. Winfrey's Watch Over and Hal Price Headley's Third Covey all are regarded as threats in the field of 13.

Bill Ackerman On Hunting

Hunters Begin Annual Quest Of Elusive Railbird

The Patuxent marshes today will hear the bang of scatterguns—taken up by many of yesterday's anglers for the next three months in quest of the elusive sora and gallinule, or in plain English, the railbird of southern Maryland.

ACKERMAN

Once their fall migrations nearly darkened the sky. Now they come in, starting late in August, singly, in pairs and occasionally maybe a half dozen; poor as Job's turkey, and because of it, lightning fast. It is not until late in September and the early birds have fattened and ready to drop down farther for their South American migration, that the small flights really start and shooting becomes really worth while.

Bag limits these days require considerable coverage of these marshes, and real work on the part of the pushers, not only because of the dwindling flights but also because these marshes are gradually raising. And given ground to run upon, rails seldom choose flight. In fact, under such conditions the hunter rarely sees the birds.

Hunting is accomplished on the high tides, with the last two hours of the flood and the first two of the ebb Northeast weather (which we have had alright but just too early) with the resulting higher tides is always the best shooting for the birds are forced to fly and the pushers can cover more ground.

Opening day is just as favorable for the hunters as if could possibly be with a morning hightide at 6:27 a. m. and the evening high coming at 6:50 which gives them parts of two tides; the regulations—sunrise to sunset—cutting off some of the morning flood and the greater part of the evening ebb. After tomorrow the evening tide will not be worth shooting.

Birds have been coming in for the past ten days on the Patuxent marshes, and the pushers are predicting a good season.

Pushers, and their little double-end skiffs are to be had at many places along the river, including the little settlement of Leon, reached by turning off the concrete one mile beyond the light on the new Solomons Island road. Their charge is five bucks for a tide, with a bonus expected for a limit bag.

The bag limit is 15, and only one day's bag allowed in possession at one time.

The season on mourning doves opens in Maryland today and continues until the thirtieth. It is open again from November 15 until December 31. The bag limit is 12. With the single exception of Delaware (open September 15 to November 30) none of the nearby States have an open season on doves.

This column has been the recipient, during the past two months, of five inquiries as to how to get a position in the Wildlife Service. Our answer could only be—go to school with that idea in mind, for considering the qualifications of just one of the experts—that of food-habits—they must know the subject well enough to recognize under the microscope minute parts of the food of more than 800 native species of birds, an even greater number of mammals, at least 350 reptiles, and possibly 20,000 plants.

Of course all employes are not experts, there are only 29 on food-habits, but if it isn't possible to continue on to the top of the heap it isn't worthwhile.

ard's knuckle balls got away from Rick Ferrell, and Keller scored from third. It was scored as a wild pitch.

Washington never did catch up. The Nats scored a run in the third after Case walked with one out. Lewis and Walker singled to center to score him, but after Travis grounded out, Myer was intentionally walked and Sanford obliged the Yanks by flying out.

Lewis Opens With Single

Buddy Lewis singled to left to open the fifth to set in motion a run that cut the Yanks' lead to 3-2. After Walker fanned, Travis singled to left and Myer singled to right. Lewis held up at third on Myer's blow until Rightfielder Henrich threw wild over Dickey's head, whereupon he scored, and Travis and Myer reached third and second respectively.

Then the Nats muffed a chance to tie the score. Sanford fouled out weakly and Pofahl struck out.

Again in the eighth the Nats muffed a chance to tie the score. Buddy Myer slashed a two-bagger off Dahlgren's mitt to open the inning and raced to third with none out when Dahlgren

41 Maryland Gridders Start Practice Today

Coaching Trio to State Two Workouts Daily for Inexperienced Squad; Only Three Regulars Returning to Varsity

By Jack Munhall

Woefully undersized and inexperienced, University of Maryland's football squad reports at College Park today for the opening of fall practice under the newly appointed coaching triumvirate of Jack Faber, Al Heagy and Al Woods.

Forty-one Terrapin candidates are expected for the start of a two-a-day training schedule, 10 o'clock in the morning and 2 o'clock in the afternoon, which will continue until beginning of the school term when the program will be cut to one drill daily. Though, in numbers, this is an unusually large squad at Maryland, it seems, in reality, one of the poorest to worry a Terp coach in recent years.

Returning to combat anotherr back - breaking schedule, which includes games with Penn, Georgetown, Virginia, Florida, Rutgers and V. M. I., are only three 1939 regulars. Moreover, of the 41 candidates, only 24 have any varsity seasoning and only eight weigh as much as 195 pounds.

All-Stars Missing

Missing from a mediocre 1939 eleven are Post All-District Tacklers Ralph Albarano and Bob Brown, the finest combination Maryland has boasted in recent years;; Goerge Lawrence, a fine guard and an inspirational leader, and his running mate, Ed Lloyd; Francis Beamer, a good offensive end, and backfield men John Boyda, Frank Shotnicki and Pershing Mondorff.

All were regulars, except Lloyd, who also saw considerable action.

As a nucleus for the current line, Heagy, who will tutor the line while Woods handles the back and Faber acts as coordinator, has George Geinger, a splendid guard, Ends Dick Shaffer, Leo Mueller and Frank Dwyer, and Centers Bob Smith and Jim Wharton.

Other lettermen of whom much will be expected include John Morton, guard, and Bill Krouse and Ralph Burlin, tackles.

In the backfield Maryland appears considerably stronger. If the Terrapins can develop a blocker of the caliber of either Boyda or Skotnicki, then their ball-carrying corps may carry the team to several victories. For in Joe Murphy, the Southern Conference spring champion, and Mearle DuVall, Maryland has a pair of fleet youngsters who can run, kick and pass. That is, unless enemy linemen seep in so fast that they are unable to get set.

Widener May Stick

Milton Lumsden and Fred Widener are the husky youths who will be given first cracks at the blocking positions in the backfield, right half and fullback. Both bear promise, especially Widener, who is a well-seasoned senior.

For backfield reserves Maryland can call upon Veterans James Dunn, Elmer Rigby, John Cordyack, Bernie Ulman and Sophomores Louis Chacos, Joe Hoopengardner and John Gilmore.

The backfield should be fairly well-balanced, for Murphy is a superb kicker and Duvall an accurate short forward passer. There appears now to be no one who can peg the ball with success for any great distance.

Hoyas Start 2-a-Day Grid Drills Tomorrow

Georgetown Coach Jack Hagerty announced yesterday that his football squad, due to report at the Hilltop tomorrow for first practice, will be sent through two drills daily from Wednesday until school begins.

A morning drill will be held at 9:30. The players will return to the field at 2:30. Each practice will last about an hour.

Hagerty and Line Coach Maurice (Much) Dubofsky are in town awaiting action. They will be joined tomorrow by End Coach George Murtagh. Hagerty is recently returned from a coaches' football school at New York and is reported to have several news ideas for offense and defense.

Equipment will be distributed at the Hilltop tomorrow at 10:30. Only one practice will be held, starting at 2:30.

Oklahoma City Blasts Dizzy Dean Off Mound in 4th

Oklahoma City, Sept. 1 (AP).—Oklahoma City's Indians blasted Dizzy Dean off the mound in his final appearance of the year in the Texas League today and defeated Tulsa, 10 to 1.

Dean, who has been called back to the Chicago Cubs for inspection after soaking his ailing arm in Texas League sunshine for three months, was a badly beaten pitcher as he headed for the showers after giving up 10 hits and 5 runs in three and one-third innings.

Oklahoma City got to Dean in a hurry, pushing across two runs in the first. The Indians scored three runs on five hits with only one man out in the fourth inning and Dean gave way to Clare Bertram.

Studebaker Nine Blanks Arcade, 8-0

Goodman Studebaker opened the Washington Automobile League season yesterday with a 5-0 shutout of Arcade Pontiac as Aaron Silverman turned in a seven-hit pitching performance.

The victors scored once in the second frame with three straight singles by Di Blasi, Dorish and Bond. In the fourth Outfielder Kidd added three more runs to Goodman's total when he tripled with the bases loaded. The final tally was pushed over in the eighth, off Shelton's single and stolen base, and Dorish's single.

Goodman goes to Martinsburg, W. Va., today to meet Blair A. C. in a single game.

Va. 'Big Six' Facing Banner Grid Year

250 Candidates Expected for First Drills Today; Pair of Games Open Schedule September 20

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Sept. 1.—Virginia's 1940 "Big Six" college football teams will be stronger and the competition keener than any season in recent years.

You may accept that on the word of the coaches who are cautious when talking about their own teams but conceded that Virginia football definitely is on the up trail after a lean decade.

Coach Frank Murrah of the University of Virginia summed up the general feeling when he said today that the "steady improvement in State football the last few years promises to reach a new peak this season."

More than 250 young athletes will answer the 1940 gridiron summons on "Big Six" campuses Monday, Labor Day, and subject themselves to three months of rigorous training.

The opening games are three weeks away when William and Mary will engage N. C. State at Norfolk and Richmond will play its annual game with the Apprentice School at Newport News, both Friday night, September 20.

Others 1 Day Later

Other schools will launch their campaigns on the following day—Roanoke at V. M. I., Hampden-Sydney at Washington and Lee, and Catawba at Virginia Tech. Virginia will wait until September 28 before opening a formidable schedule against Lehigh at Charlottesville.

Virginia Military Institute's Keydets are the defending champions as the result of 1939 triumphs over Virginia and Virginia Tech and a muddy tie with Richmond. All other State elevens lost at least one game to an Old Dominion foe.

Now, take it away coaches:

Allison (Pooley) Hubert, V. M. I.—"We ought to have a pretty good season if we can get by a tough schedule with minimum injuries to key players. We have 16 lettermen who gained valuable experience against strong teams last year. The loss of Paul Shu is bound to make a big difference as he was a fine captain and team player as well as a great back. Bosh Pritchard will be our greatest asset and I regard him as even a better All-American prospect than Shu. We have about 20 sophomores from last year's fair freshman team but Joe Muha, 200-pound triple-threat, looks like the only sure first-stringer. Several linemen will help our reserve strength at center and end."

Progress Necessary

Frank Murray, Virginia—"Virginia's immediate future depends upon the progressive development of players of previous varsity experience as well as how the new men shape up to strengthen key positions. With most of last year's regulars returning, a quick start can be made in perfecting details. Our hope is to show general improvement, needed every Saturday this season. No team will have a finer leader than Lee McLaughlin, who should have his best year at left tackle."

Henry Redd, Virginia Tech—"I think Tech will be better this year. Whether that means we will win any more games than last year (won four, lost five, tied one), I don't know. You see, the other teams are better too. Some of them will be more improved over their 39 teams than Tech. We face four tough ones in the first half of the season—Marshall, Richmond, William and Mary and Georgetown. The Tech men should show some good kicking and passing and have a potentially stronger running attack."

McFadden Signs With Grid Dodgers

Clemson, S. C., Sept. 1 (AP).—Banks McFadden, All-American back on Clemson's 1939 Cotton Bowl football team, said here today that he had signed a one-year contract with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

He planned to leave late tonight to join the pro football squad at Princeton, N. J. He gave no other details of his contract.

Girls' Softball Champs

Portmouth, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Virginia Dairy, of Richmond, today captured the State girls' softball championship by scoring their second straight victory over Morton Jewelers, also of Richmond. The score was 9 to 3.

Brewers Defeat St. Elizabeths, 6-5

The Saints jumped into a 4-run lead in the first two innings and weren't tied until the eighth. For three innings both clubs were unable to score again, but two runs in the Brewers' half of the twelfth finally nullified a single tally by St. Elizabeth's later on.

Heurich thus goes into today's game with Pepco, U. S. Government league titleholder, on the long end of the odds. Hostilities will get under way at 10 a. m. on the South Ellipse. In a second game today, Pepco will square off with St. Elizabeth's on the same diamond at 3 p. m. Further games in the two-losses-and-out tourney will be arranged tonight.

If ever a pitcher deserved to win, it was Johnny McFadden, St. Elizabeth's pitcher yesterday. He pitched Heurich's Art Lacey to a standstill and finally lost the ball game on two unearned runs.

First Baseman Cade gave Lacey a life to start the fatal twelfth when he let an easy fly tumble off his fingers. Knight then grounded out, pitcher to first, but Kaufman came up with a sharp single to center to score Lacey. What should have been the third out with one man left stranded was then furnished by Barry, a fly to deep center.

Saints Score In Twelfth

St. Elizabeth's bounced right back in its half of the twelfth with a run of its own. With one man out, Shugrue walked, stole second and then third and romped across the plate when Boyce singled. The next two batters, however, were easy meat for Lacey.

Easily the outstanding blow of the game was delivered by Pitcher McFadden as he boosted his team's lead from 1-0 to 4-0 in the second inning. Two singles and a walk loaded the sacks, and then Johnny collected a rousing double that cleared the base paths.

Downes started for the eventual winners, but McFadden's double caused him to be yanked. Lacey hurled one of his best games of the year from there in.

Miller Nine Wins 2d Half Championship

Flood Nine Beaten In Decisive Game; Lanny Birch Stars

Its worst beating of the year was suffered by the J. C. Flood nine yesterday as Miller Furniture took a 10-4 victory and captured the second-half championship of the National City "A" League.

The triumph earned Miller a three-game playoff for the league title with Klein Tavern, first-half winner, the first two games of which will be played next Sunday on the South Ellipse.

Mainly instrumental in Miller's unexpectedly wide margin was Pitcher Lanny Birch, who allowed the losers only four singles. His mates reached Jack Redinger and Dick Rozelle for seven safeties, including a 2-run double play by Freddy Wahler.

For two innings Flood boasted a lead in the important meeting. It scored once on a walk, pass ball and McHale's single in the second inning, but Miller came right back with three runs in the third. From then on there was no doubt of the outcome. The winners pushed over two more scores in the sixth, one in the seventh, and four in the eighth.

In the junior division of the league, Kneesi Cubs swamped the Cadinal A. C., 11-5, to hold second place under the leading Naiman Photo nine. Centerfielder Gingells Second Baseman Foust led the 21-hit batting barrage of the winners with four for four, and three for three, respectively. Gingell's had a double and triple mixed up in his record.

When Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins gives "A Labor Day Address" over WJSV and the Columbia network at 7 tonight, she will be carrying out an unbroken tradition of seven years' standing.

The Labor Secretary will be speaking for the eighth consecutive year over C. B. S. on the subject when she is heard giving her review of Labor's progress in America for the past year and a preview of its prospects for the next.

Since it's essentially Labor's Day, other prominent labor figures are to be heard over WJSV and C. B. S. Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, who was Secretary of Labor under three administrations—those of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover—will talk at 6:15 of the effect on Labor of America's preparedness efforts of the moment. His topic is "A Dictator's Threat to Free Labor." A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, speaks on Labor's present-day problems at 4:30 p. m.

And speaking of prominent persons talking, the President is to be heard twice today over WJSV and the Columbia network. The addresses are at 11 a. m. when he dedicates the new Chickamauga Dam in the Tennessee Valley and at 5 p. m. when he dedicates Great Smoky National Park at Newfound Gap. The White House has announced that both speeches are nonpolitical in nature.

Cardenas Talk Punctuated By Gunfire

11 Wounded in Brawls; Retiring President Repudiates Almazan

By Jack O'Brine

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Mexico City, Sept. 1.—Scattered mounting political tension in the Mexican capital today, as President Lazaro Cardenas, in his farewell address before congress repudiated the opposition and appealed for national unity to cope with the dangers besetting this hemisphere.

At least 11 persons were wounded by gunfire in various parts of the federal district, before President Cardenas had finished the 65-minute address, in which he summarized the accomplishments of his six-year term of office, which expires on December 1.

President Cardenas, unmistakably throwing the weight of his administration on the side of Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, his presumptive successor, on whose ticket the "official" congress was elected, said that all the electoral proceedings in the disputed July 7 election were, in his opinion, legal and that there was "no reason to expect trouble" of a revolutionary nature.

But as he spoke, it was announced by officials of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan's oppositionist party that in a secret place in another part of the capital, deputies and senators of the antigovernment party had succeeded in holding the opening session of the first rump congress in the history of Mexico.

Gen. Emilio Madero, president of the party said: "Our congress held its first formal session in a secret place today because we lacked guarantees to meet in a proper public building."

One of the most lively shooting affrays occurred directly opposite the Hotel Imperial on the Paseo de la Reforma. More than 50 shots were exchanged between parading peasants of the Government Party and a group of bricklayers barricaded in a half-finished building.

This shooting and four others occurred despite sharp vigilance of the Mexican police and more than 10,000 Federal troops that were stationed at strategic parts of the capital in the most stringent precautions that the government had taken in years to prevent trouble.

The new "official" congress as its first act struck a hard blow at the Communist Party in Mexico, approving by a unanimous vote a resolution supporting the president's recent criticism of the Communist Party and demanding that the Government Party sever "all relations with the Communists because of their disloyalty and lack of patriotism."

This was believed highly significant in that it brought out the fact that the new congress was far to the right of the retiring legislative bodies of the republic and, though friendly to President Cardenas, might be expected to reform drastically some of the points of his Leftist program.

In his address President Cardenas emphasized the "unusual conditions" prevailing in the world and said that they had made it imperative that Mexico assume a "firm and definite position close to the countries of this hemisphere."

He said Mexico stood ready to offer international cooperation in the interests of peace and would continue to denounce violence whenever the occasion arose.

Farm Income Put Near $9,000,000,000

The Bureau of Agricultural economics estimated yesterday that farm income for 1940 would total $8,900,000,000 or $380,000,000 more than last year.

The figure includes products sold and Government payments.

In a monthly summary of the prospective farm situation, the bureau also said:

That agricultural employment would increase in September; farm prices were higher this year than last; about the same acreage would be sowed to wheat in 1941 as 1940; the outlook continued favorable for domestic cotton consumption continued "exceptionally unfavorable" for exports; fewer cattle would be fed this fall and winter than last; and the number of sows farrowing this fall would be at least 12 per cent smaller than 1939.
